Willkie Repeats His Demand for Second Front

No Inspiration From War Chiefs, He Tells Nation

"Let's Have No More of This Nonsense", GOP Leader Asserts

Deplores "Tragically Small" Amount of Material Reaching Allies

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie reiterated tonight his demands for a second front in Europe and asserted that the record of the war to date was not such as to inspire "any sublime faith in the infallibility of our military and naval experts."

Reporting to the nation on his recent glove-girdling air tour of allied and neutral nations, Willkie described as "misdirected censorship" the idea that non-military experts or persons unconnected with the government should refrain from making suggestions about the conduct of the war—"military, industrial, economic or political."

"Let's have no more of this nonsense," Willkie declared. "Military experts, as well as our leaders, must be constantly exposed to democracy's greatest driving power—the whip-lash of public opinion, developed from honest, free discussions."

At another point, Willkie said, "I reiterate: we and our allies must establish a second fighting front in Europe. I also hope that shortly we can put the considerable force in India to aggressive use in an all-out attack on Burma, as General Wavell has urged."

After describing what he termed a "reservoir of goodwill" existing in the nations he visited on a trip which took him to the middle east, China and Russia, the titular head of the Republican party asserted that this reservoir, nevertheless, was leaking "dangerously" through holes which were not punched by Hitler, but by us.

Asks More Aid for Allies

One of those leaks, he said, was the "tragically small" amount of war material reaching the embattled legions of the United Nations, and warned that "if we continue to fail to deliver to our Allies what they are entitled to expect of us or what we have promised them, our reservoir of goodwill will turn into one of resentment."

"We owe them more than boasts and broken promises," he said.

Wins 200 "S" Cards At Races; Grand Jury Will Consider Case

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Sidney S. Cohen was ordered held today for grand jury action on charges of illegally possessing gasoline ration coupons not issued to him in the first such case in Washington.

Police who arrested Cohen found he possessed 200 "S" coupons while his automobile bore an "A" sticker. On questioning, Cohen declared he won the "S" coupons betting on Whirlaway last Saturday at Laurel race track.

Nazi Raiders Strike at England, Kill Eight Persons along Coast

LONDON, Oct. 26 (AP)—German raiders struck at England from the cover of low clouds today, killing at least eight persons along the south coast and inland, and giving London two raid alarms, the first there in a week.

Two of the bombers were shot down, and others were damaged in dogfights over the English channel with an interception screen of Spitfires and Hurricanes.

U. S. NAVY WINNING ON SEVEN FRONTS, CAPT. LOVETTE SAYS

Meeting Most Stupendous Job Ever Undertaken by Any Navy, Officer Asserts in Speech

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 26 (AP)—America's navy, fighting on seven fronts, is confronted with and successfully meeting "the most stupendous job ever undertaken by any navy," Capt. Leland P. Lovette, director of Navy Public Relations declared here today.

Roosevelt Calls U. S. Commanders Into Conference

Believed To Have Discussed Grave Situation in Solomons

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—President Roosevelt called the naval high command into conference late today as the defenders of Guadalcanal in the Solomons apparently faced one of the most terrific ordeals in American history.

With reinforced Japanese obviously bent on throwing everything they have into a drive to overwhelm the marines and army men, an atmosphere of tense expectation was apparent in some Washington quarters.

Conferring with the president was Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet, and Mr. Roosevelt's personal chief of staff, Admiral William D. Leahy. The conference said nothing to newspapers, but it was considered probable that the conference dealt with strategic and combat problems in the southwest Pacific, particularly the Solomon Islands.

Rep. Maas Reports

Rep. Maas (R-Minn.) who saw more than four months of duty as a marine corps colonel in the Southwest Pacific, was another White House visitor and gave the president a report on conditions.

Maas would not say what the general tenor his report was, but there was nothing to indicate it was optimistic.

The congressman, senior Republican member of the House Naval committee, served in the last war on Whirlaway last Saturday at Laurel race track.

at one plane which was hidden in the clouds.

No bombs were reported in London, but there were some attacks in the home counties.

Seven persons were killed and others injured in a town in south-eastern England. One was killed and six were hurt near a town in the home counties.

Bombs also were dropped on three south coast towns and one town on the southwest coast. Damage was described as slight.

"Our great trouble today is in making people realize how many fronts we actually have," the captain said in a pre-navy day message given to a meeting sponsored by the Pittsburgh daily newspapers and the Chamber of Commerce.

He drew cheers when he asserted the navy has escorted more than 600,000 troops overseas "without the loss of a single soldier."

Cover Many Fronts

The supply line-fronts he said, are to Russia, the British Isles, Hawaii, Australia, the Aleutians, Africa-Far East and India for China.

Turning to the long northern supply route to Russia, the captain said:

"That probably is the most important front of the Atlantic. It is the fearful route—the dreadful, terrible route where a survivor cannot live longer than five minutes."

"We have lost heavily on this front. But if fifty per cent of our cargo gets through, then it is worth it. The front must be supplied."

Capt. Lovette has twenty-eight years service with the navy and at forty-five is one of its youngest captains.

Japs Pay in Aleutians

The officer claimed that in the Aleutians the Japs more than paid the price for what good they may have achieved, saying:

"I submit that never in amphibious war has an outfit lost so much for so little gained."

He said the navy knew definitely fourteen Japanese vessels, including six destroyers, have been sunk in the Aleutians and probably many others.

Capt. Lovette said he believed Australia now would be in the hands of the Japanese, if the navy had not been able to keep open the 7,000 mile supply route to that country.

Sherman Brothers To Make Japs Pay

MELROSE, Mass., Oct. 26 (AP)—Any of the neighbors will tell you it's a cinch that the six fighting Sherman brothers will make the Japs pay dearly for sinking the aircraft carrier "Wasp" commanded by one of their number, Captain Forrest P. Sherman, 46-year old Annapolis graduate.

All six are in service, two in the navy with Forrest, two others in the army and one in the marines. All hold officers' rank and their field of operations extends from Fort Benning, Ga., to the far corners of the Pacific.

British Advance In Drive against El Alamein Line

Imperial and Allied Troops Making Good Progress in Desert

Germans Concentrating Tanks For Decisive Battle

By DON WHITEHEAD

CAIRO, Oct. 26 (AP)—The armored force of the British Eighth army was in fighting position tonight well inside the Axis El Alamein line, and at the end of three days of attack it appeared certain that the Imperial and Allied troops had successfully accomplished the first phase of the battle.

The Allied infantry had battered in the static defenses of the Rommel forces, at the same time attacking with tank support on both flanks. The closely following armored divisions of the Eighth army rushed through to positions behind the forward German and Italian troops. Enemy counter-attacks failed to dislodge them, and 1,450 prisoners fell into Allied hands.

Critical Battle Soon

Now the Germans are concentrating their own tanks for the major battle which is expected to bring the main armored forces of both sides into direct conflict.

(Unofficial dispatches received in London said that the Allied ground attack had overrun two Axis defense lines in one sector, advancing two miles, or half-way through the enemy positions.

(Axis communiques claimed that 104 British tanks had been destroyed so far and that the Axis was holding firmly to its positions. However, one German broadcast admitted that the Allies had scored "initial gains against Italian divisions.")

In proud aerial canopy, sometimes outnumbering the enemy 5 to 1, American, British, South African and Australian bomber and fighter squadrons were in continuous action, day and night.

The "Black Scorpion" fighter squadron of the USAAF shot down four of the seven enemy fighters known to have been destroyed over the battle area Sunday, and damaged three more.

Hi-Jacking Ring Broken by FBI

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 26 (AP)—A hi-jacking ring that operated throughout the east has been smashed with the arrest of eleven men, E. E. Conroy, FBI chief in New Jersey, announced today.

The ring, which had information of the shipments of valuable cargoes of liquor, was trapped through its practice of using eye glasses covered with adhesive tape to blindfold truck drivers after taking them prisoner, Conroy said.

In one case, Conroy related, the gang took over a truck loaded with 495 cases of Scotch whisky as it left a ferry boat at the 23rd street slip in New York. A throng of travellers failed to notice the hold-up in broad daylight.

At least seven others are being sought in addition to the eleven arrested during the past week, Conroy said. The others include the brains of the gang who lined up an efficient organization of fences ready to accept the hi-jacked loads, he added.

Conroy valued the loot collected since last June at $50,000.

Warplanes Raid New Guinea Japs

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Tuesday, Oct. 27 (AP)—Allied warplanes made widespread raids on Japanese bases in New Guinea and Dutch Timor yesterday, General MacArthur reported today.

Attacks were made against Koeppang, the Japanese airbase on the southwestern tip of Dutch Timor, and against Lae and Salamaua, both on the northeast coast of New Guinea, and against Kokoda, on the trail from Buna to Port Moresby.

The enemy meantime raided Darwin, Australia, and Port Moresby, and Milne Bay in New Guinea, the communiques said.

$21,000,000 AIRCRAFT CARRIER SUNK BY JAPS

The Wasp (above) is the third aircraft carrier whose loss has been announced by the Navy since the start of the war. The 33,000-ton Lexington was sunk in May, in the battle of the Coral Sea, and the 19,500-ton Yorktown was lost at the battle of Midway in July. That leaves the fleet with four known carriers—the 19,900-ton Enterprise, the 33,000-ton Saratoga, the Hornet of 20,000 tons and the Ranger, about the same size as the Wasp. The cost of the Wasp was $21,000,000.

Survivors Tell Story of Sinking Of Carrier Wasp

"It Felt Like an Earthquake," Seaman Says at Miami, Florida

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 26 (AP)—"It felt like an earthquake," said W. C. Chapman, 18, fireman second class, aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp, "when the ship was shaken" from stem to stern by three torpedoes.

"Men in the forward part of the ship were thrown around like tennis balls. I was standing watch aft of the port midship. I grabbed my life jacket, which was hanging on the splinter shield of my gun."

Chapman, here on leave to visit his family, said in an interview that everyone aboard the injured Wasp was calm.

Like Boat Drill

"It seemed just like a boat drill," he said. "Shells were exploding forward and amidship. I heard fragments whine through the air overhead."

"The ship listed heavily to the starboard. One fighter plane rolled over the side. The jolt of the explosions made the landing gear give way on the planes. A lot of men were in the water, and oil coated the surface. Everyone lay flat on the flight deck awaiting the word to abandon ship. Doctors were giving first aid on the flight deck. There was another explosion and I saw hundreds of shoes being thrown into the water."

RAF Plane Crash Is Fatal to 16

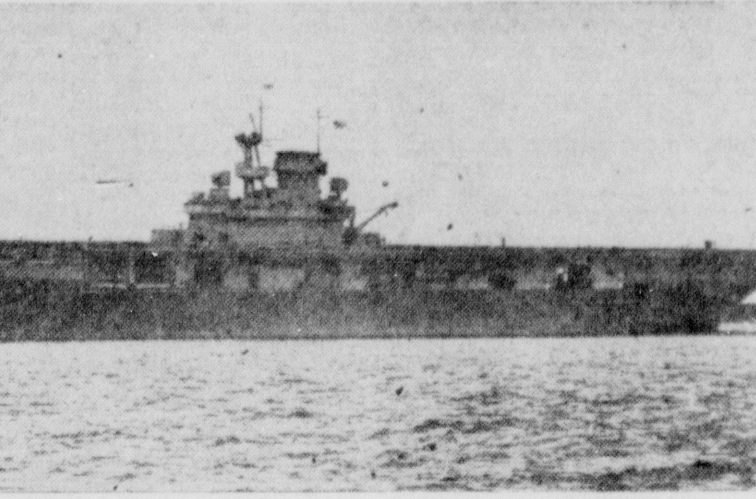

MONTREAL, Oct. 26 (AP)—An RAF ferry command plane crashed near here today killing all sixteen persons on board, including two crew members, four civilians and ten Royal Canadian Air Force men from the Lachine training depot.

All the victims were listed as having Canadian addresses except one, Capt. Carl Frederick Kaiser, whose wife lives at Roseville, Mich.

From the accounts of the few eyewitnesses it was indicated that the plane had run into difficulties—possibly caused by failure of one motor—soon after taking off. The pilot started to circle toward the airport, but was unable to gain altitude and crashed in a plowed field after narrowly missing the roof of a farm house.

Authorities were investigating the cause of the crash.

Second Carrier Badly Damaged, Destroyer Sunk

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—A tremendous land, sea and air struggle has broken out in full fury in the Solomons, with attacking Japanese and defending Americans suffering severe blows, the Navy revealed tonight a short time after it had disclosed the loss of the United States aircraft carrier Wasp in the same area on Sept. 15.

The current phase of the battle, expected to be crucial, started on Sunday (Solomons time) when the enemy unleashed the full force of his coordinated land, sea and air forces in an effort to capture Guadalcanal with its vital airport.

The marines and soldiers on the islands stood fast, but in the accompanying air and sea actions, the Americans suffered:

Severe damage to an unidentified aircraft carrier, the loss of the Destroyer Porter, and damage to an unspecified number of other ships.

The Japanese suffered these blows:

JAP LOSES HEAVY

Two carriers damaged, two heavy cruisers damaged, one light cruiser damaged, five bombers damaged and seventeen fighting planes shot down.

There were few details of the land fighting on the island of Guadalcanal beyond the terse Navy department announcement that it was "heavy." The foe launched his fierce assault at the southern flank of the American line but "army and marine corps troops held their positions."

About mid-morning on Sunday (Saturday Washington time), Japanese cruisers and destroyers approached and dropped shells on the American positions on Guadalcanal.

In the early afternoon of that same day, Douglas Dauntless dive bombers from Guadalcanal swooped down on enemy cruisers and destroyers north of Florida island. They hit a heavy cruiser and "stopped" her.

Hit Second Cruiser

Returning to attack the same enemy squadron in the late afternoon, the dive bombers hit another heavy cruiser. Swiftly following up the attack, army Flying Fortress blasted a light cruiser which was on duty.

German Losses In Russia Set At 10,000,000

COMMUNIST EDITOR SURE REDS WILL ANNIHILATE THE NAZIS

MOSCOW, Oct. 26 (AP)—P. N. Pospelov, member of the Communist party Central committee, said in a speech to the Red army today that the Germans had lost 10,000,000 men killed, wounded and taken prisoner in the battle for Russia.

"The friendly relations between the Soviet Union, Britain and the United States have become stronger but the opening of a second front in Europe would further strengthen our fighting friendship with our Allies."

He quoted from Premier Stalin's letter to the Associated Press in which Stalin called a second front of first rate importance and called upon Russia's allies to "fulfill their obligations fully and on time."

Pospelov said that the Red army had "shattered" seventy-three German divisions between May 1 and Aug. 1 and that it "had all the possibilities" of halting, routing and annihilating the Germans.

Coffee To Be Rationed Soon Just Like Sugar

Cup a Day To Be Allowed To All over 15 Years of Age

By WILLIAM R. SPEAR
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Coffee rationing starts Nov. 29, the government announced today, but it will be more liberal than the sugar which has frightened housewives in many cities into hoarding and over-buying.

One pound every five weeks will be allowed for every person who was fifteen or older when sugar rationing started last May. This works out to slightly more than one cup a day, and in households where children fifteen or older do not drink coffee, the grownups can have the children's share as well as their own.

Restaurant Plans Later
Moreover, it will still be possible to get a cup of coffee in a restaurant regardless of how much is used at home. Details of the rationing for restaurants are still to be announced but it probably will follow that of sugar, restricting commercial users to a certain percentage of their former consumption.

And those who care to substitute tea, cocoa or other beverages for coffee at certain meals can drink all they wish. No rationing of these drinks is being imposed, at least for the present.

Retail sales of coffee will be stopped at midnight Nov. 21 in preparation for the rationing starting at midnight Nov. 29. In that interval grocers can stock their shelves for the start of rationing.

Will Use Sugar Books

The sugar ration book will be used for coffee and no new registration will be necessary. The last ten stamps in the book will be used for coffee. Because of the position of these stamps, No. 27 will be good for the first coffee ration, No. 28 for the second, No. 29 for the third, No. 30 for the fourth, 31 for the fifth, 32 for the sixth, and so on, working backward to No. 19.

The plan will involve no curtailment of sugar rations and new books will be available when the sugar and coffee stamps are exhausted.

The sugar ration books were issued for everyone from babies to grownups. But only books where the age of the user appears as fifteen or older can be used to get coffee.

Failure to define clearly our war aims, Willkie said, also was losing friends for us and he suggested that by the silence on the part of the United States toward the problem of Indian independence "we have already drawn heavily on our reservoir of good-will in the east."

Explain His Remarks

Making it clear that his remarks were not intended to refer to the British Commonwealth of the free nations, Willkie suggested, however, that "British Colonial possessions are but remnants of empire" and that there were millions of men and women within the commonwealth "working selflessly and with great skill toward reducing these remnants, extending the commonwealth in place of the Colonial system."

Willkie also scored what he termed the "half-ignorant, half-patronizing way in which we have grown accustomed to treating many of the peoples in Eastern Europe and Asia."

Leaders of our Allies and potential Allies are proud and intelligent men, Willkie said, mentioning the Shah of Iran, the prime minister of Iraq, the prime minister of the foreign minister of Turkey and the generalissimo of China. They are in a substantial agreement, he added, as to the necessity of "abolishing imperialism, of liberating the peoples of the world, of making freedom a reality instead of just a nice word."

Criticizes United States

The United States has consistently failed to send to these leaders representatives with authority to discuss such problems "intelligently" and to take realistic steps toward their solution, Willkie added.

In particular, he continued, no man of cabinet rank has been sent on special missions to Russia "to talk to Mr. Stalin," adding that it was the British prime minister who spoke primarily for this country on the last such mission.

"We must wipe out the distinction in our minds between 'first class' and 'second class' Allies," he asserted. "We must tend to represent us among all our allies really distinguished men who are important enough in their own right to dare tell our president the truth."

Stupid, arbitrary or undemocratic censorship, Willkie declared, resulted in "atrophy of intelligence" and he asserted that facts such as he had collected on his trip and reported in his speech "should be given to us all."

Must Keep Friends

"For unless we recognize and correct them, we may lose the friendship of half our allies before the war is over and then lose the peace."

Second Carrier

left burning and dead in the water. On Monday, (Sunday Washington time), a carrier task force of the American fleet traded aerial blows with strong enemy forces northeast of Guadalcanal.

It was in this action that the destroyer Porter was sunk, an American aircraft carrier severely damaged and other United States vessels hit. In return, the American forces damaged two enemy aircraft carriers.

Meanwhile, the enemy's aviation kept trying to blast the defensive positions on Guadalcanal. Although they inflicted some damage, they lost twenty-two of their aircraft.

240 Men Aboard Porter

The destroyer Porter, commissioned Aug. 27, 1936, carried a normal complement of 240 officers and men. She was commanded by Lt. Commander David G. Roberts, 41, of Flint, Mich., a 1925 graduate of Annapolis.

The carrier Wasp, one of the newest on the seas, went down last month in the same Solomons islands waters where the hulks of three American cruisers, five destroyers and four other ships already lay.

While covering with other warships the movement of reinforcements and supplies to the heavily-beset United States marines and soldiers on Guadalcanal, the Wasp was attacked by a Japanese submarine which rammed three torpedoes home near her powder magazines and gasoline tanks in which she carried fuel for her eighty planes.

Crew Abandons Ship

Numerous explosions followed almost instantly and fires broke out along the entire 739-foot length of the big ship. They could not be controlled, and three hours later the crew abandoned ship. Two hours later an American destroyer had to finish her off with more torpedoes.

About ninety percent of her crew was rescued. Her normal complement was 1,800 men, including the files.

Because of the circumstances under which she was lost, the navy explained, it was hoped that the Japanese submarine skipper who attacked her did not realize the full extent of his blow and thus the loss was not made public for more than a month.

Somber Note for Navy Day

But the timing of the announcement lent a somber note to navy day to be celebrated tomorrow. President Roosevelt had written Secretary Knox in this connection that the American people "know that their navy is doing the biggest job any navy has ever been called upon to do, and doing it superbly."

The loss of the Wasp unquestionably was known to the commander-in-chief before his public announcement but in view of the over-all naval situation he found no occasion to alter his general commendation.

Roosevelt Calls Conference

The loss of the Wasp was announced in a communique which was headed "South Pacific" but which had nothing to report on the progress of the fighting on Guadalcanal where the defenders faced strong Japanese forces bent on winning back the vital airfield there and wiping out America's first offensive of the war. President Roosevelt called in his naval high command for a conference late in the day.

The Wasp was commanded by Capt. Forrest P. Sherman, 45, of Melrose, Mass., who was not a casualty so far as is known here.

Commissioned in 1940

The Wasp was launched April 4, 1939, at the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Mass., and was commissioned at Boston April 25, 1940. She was 688 feet long, had a beam of eighty feet eight inches, and normally carried at least seventy-two planes.

The carrier, christened by Mrs. Charles Edison, whose husband then was assistant secretary of the navy, was the fourth vessel of the United States navy designed and built from the start as an aircraft carrier.

Her first skipper was Capt. John Walter Reeves, Jr., who has since been promoted to rear admiral and now has a command at sea.

In her comparatively brief career, the Wasp not only brought help to the beleaguered garrison of Malta with the delivery of planes—accomplishing the mission without damage to herself—but was engaged earlier—on March 7, 1941—in a sea rescue of the crew of the schooner George E. Klenck of Southwest Harbor, Me., which was foundering in heavy gales off Cape Hatteras.

Commander a New Englander

Sherman, who commanded the Wasp at the time of her sinking, was born October 30, 1896, at Meeri-mack, N. H. He attended Melrose (Mass.) High School and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology before his appointment to the naval academy in 1914.

Graduating from Annapolis in June, 1917, standing second in his class, he served during the first World War aboard the U. S. S. Nashville in Mediterranean waters and later in the destroyer Murray, which was based at Brest, France.

He completed his flight training at Pensacola, Fla., April, 1923, and at various times has served aboard the Lexington, the Saratoga and the Ranger. He has commanded fighting squadrons aboard navy carriers, and for a time was in charge of the aviation ordnance section of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance.

He was assigned to command the Wasp in early summer, 1942, after serving as a member of the United States-Canada Joint Permanent Defense Board.

Americans Bomb Japs in China On Major Scale

Deliver Destructive Punches at Hongkong and Other Places

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN

WITH THE U. S. AIR FORCES IN CHINA, Oct. 26 (AP)—Hitting the Japanese in a new quarter, American bombers delivered a destructive one-two punch against Hongkong early today and yesterday in a spreading offensive which now has carried the air war to the enemy the length and breadth of occupied China.

Today's raid flattened Hongkong's main electric power plant a few hours after the colony's sprawling waterfront was set aflame Sunday afternoon by the greatest assault yet executed by airmen of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's China command. The second Hongkong attack was coupled with another at the enemy's Whitecloud air-drome near Canton, some ninety miles away, and there big flames and explosions were set off.

The Japanese, caught flatfooted at Hongkong, lost ten fighters and probably five more out of formations which challenged the Americans after they had loosed their bombs in the first attack. Against these enemy losses the Americans lost one bomber in their initial sortie; none in the second.

13 Jap Planes Bagged

The bag of enemy craft for Sunday was increased to thirteen about two hours and nine probably destroyed when U. S. fighters jumped 20 enemy fighters over Yunnan province, in south China, and downed three of the foe and possibly four more without loss to themselves.

I rode in one of the bombers participating in the Sunday raid on Hongkong, the first against that occupied British crown colony since December. Brig. Gen. Caleb V. Haynes, chief of the U. S. bomber command in China, personally led the bombers and Col. Robert L. Scott commanded the fighter escort.

Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the United States air forces in China, directed the operation from an advanced air field.

Sweeping in at 1 p. m., our bombers picked their targets methodically and soon flames and explosions mushroomed along the waterfront. Other bombs fell among small ships, knocking them sky high.

All Bombs Hit Targets

Then, with the still-raging fires serving as beacons, the night raiders followed soon after midnight, concentrating on the north front power station, which is situated on the water front and which the Japanese captured intact with Hongkong.

But today the vital installations which the enemy was so careful to leave unharmed during the days of his siege was in ruins. General Stilwell's headquarters reported that every one of bombs cast by his raiders found its mark.

The Hongkong raids put the Japanese under American bombs all the way from the shadow of the great wall above Tientsin in the north, where the vast Kailan coal mines were heavily attacked last Wednesday, to tropical China in the south.

These broadening Allied operations were greeted joyfully in Chungking, where they were hailed as the beginning of a great aerial offensive preliminary to the start of a land campaign to free all China of the enemy.

The Kailan raid, which severely crippled the source of 65 to 75 percent of the coke for Japan's steel industries, and subsequent Hongkong assaults provided concrete evidence that all of occupied China now is within reach of Allied planes.

Japs Belittle Raid

The Japanese, attempting to minimize the effect of the raid on Hongkong, broadcast an announcement that damage was "negligible."

The Tokyo radio dwelt instead on broadcasts telling of attacks on Allied air bases at Chittagong and Tinsukia, in East India near the Burma border, yesterday in a sudden outburst of aerial activity in that theater.

Although an announcement by Japanese Imperial headquarters described the raids as "on the largest scale since the outbreak of the war in greater East Asia," the British command at New Delhi said casualties were extremely light and damage was small. The Japanese asserted that more than thirty-nine planes were destroyed around and three were shot down in combat.

The British reported further enemy air attacks on airfields in that area of northeast Asia today, but details of damage were lacking immediately. One of today's raiders was shot down and two of its crewmen took to their parachutes.

The Japanese attacks on the Indian bases were spurred by recent reports of an impending allied drive to throw the enemy out of Burma in order to reopen the Burma road supply line to China.

Served in Solomons

Maas was with the Navy men when American forces went into the Solomons, and he was with the Marines for a time after they established themselves at Guadalcanal.

Last night's communique told how the Japanese, despite continuous blows dealt to their naval support, have landed fresh troops on Guadalcanal.

Using tanks and a heavy military barrage, they assaulted the western defense line of the Americans five times Friday night and Saturday morning. Each attack was repulsed.

The communique made no mention of any American tanks in action.

Longer Working Hours Advocated By Hershey in Letter to McNary

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Major General Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, declared today that "we are not getting the maximum from our manpower" and suggested more efficient industrial management and longer working hours as a partial answer.

"Every person in the nation must give of his maximum ability to the war effort," he said in testimony before the Senate Military committee considering compulsory manpower legislation.

Hershey opposed any drafting of manpower for civilian tasks, at least for the present. He took the position that further steps could be taken under the existing setup.

In addition to more efficiency and longer hours in industry, he suggested that unnecessary absences of workers be reduced, that unessential agriculture be curtailed, that labor pitting and discrimination against women be ended and that voluntary recruiting be abandoned by the armed forces in favor of inductions through selective service.

Col. Lewis Sanders, head of the selective service reemployment division, joined his chief in urging that uncontrolled enlistments be halted, saying that they figured largely in the manpower shortage. In order to maintain "the spirit of volunteering," however, he proposed that men be permitted to enlist and then placed in reserve status to continue as their work until called in the course of the draft.

On the other hand, Secretary of War Stimson contended that labor shortages did not result altogether from the demands of the army and navy "but in many instances from such inducements as wage differentials which siphon labor from one profession into another."

The secretary's views were given in a new letter to Senator McNary (R-Ore.) reiterating that soldiers could not be furloughed for farm or factory work. Stimson complained that manpower shortages faced by the armed forces were rarely acknowledged.

One enemy merchantman, hit by a British bomb off Tobruk, blew up and vanished. In the same area, British fighters ran into a formation of thirty-three Junkers—fifty-two transport planes, escorted by Messerschmitt-109s, and in a hot battle destroyed four Junkers and severely damaged others.

All told, the Allies lost but three fighters Sunday.

Deep, thickly-sown Axis minefields were proving the most hardy obstacle to the Allied advance, and some of the attacking tanks were damaged in the progress of penetration.

In the main, however, the Allied armored formations and supporting vehicles moved readily through the gaps made by engineers and infantry, and reformed on various desert strong points.

Allied Tanks in Action
Several times Allied forward tanks took part in sharp skirmishes, and they came out with flying colors. Reports to advanced battle headquarters said they were able to continue the fight, though hit, until the opposing tanks were destroyed.

Cold wind and rain swept over the desert during Sunday night, while the Allied heavy guns pounded at the enemy. The Germans flew over some heavy bombers from Crete to attack Allied rear areas.

Axis broadcasts expressed concern over the operations of the American-made motor torpedo boats with which the British attacked the advanced Axis port of Matruh over last Friday night. Both Rome and Berlin attempted to portray this as a frustrated attempt to land behind the Axis lines.

O'Connor will spend one more day campaigning in Baltimore and then he will head for Western Maryland. He's due to speak at Hagerstown Wednesday and Cumberland on Thursday.

The campaign in Baltimore, from the Democratic standpoint, will really be in high today. No less than eight rallies will be held tonight and O'Connor will cover as many as he can.

Beall With McKeldin
The McKeldin tour of Garrett county began at Grantsville yesterday morning, winding up at Oakland with a mass rally last night. J. Glenn Beall, Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixth; Leo H. Miller, candidate for associate judge, and Horace P. Whitworth, Sr., candidate for attorney general, all western Marylanders, accompanied McKeldin in his campaign tour.

O'Connor's Broken Faith
McKeldin, who wound up a tour of Garrett county by addressing some 200 persons at the Oakland High School auditorium, devoted much of his speech to what he asserted was O'Connor's "continuous broken faith" with the people of Maryland.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate said proof of the broken faith was O'Connor's announcement that he had no time for campaigning and the governor's resultant following of McKeldin "into every part of the state," failure to keep his promise to seek only one term in office, and "sticking his nose into county elections all over the state" as well as carrying on other political activity after saying he wasn't interested in building a political machine.

So far as the state's $10,000,000 surplus was concerned, McKeldin said, it should be given back to the people for purchases of war bonds.

Committee Votes Down Poll Tax
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Opponents of the poll tax won a round today when the Senate Judiciary committee approved, 13 to 5, a bill banning the tax as a prerequisite to voting in primaries or elections involving federal offices.

Senator Connally (D-Tex.), whose state is one of the eight collecting a poll tax, issued a statement in which he called the bill unconstitutional.

"This bill means federal control of elections," he said. "Don't let the states or the people forget that fact. However obnoxious may be poll tax requirements, they are not as bad as federal bayonets at the voting booths."

There was some indication the bill's opponents might stage a filibuster, if necessary to stall its passage in the present session of Congress.

408 Men Listed In Latest List Of Casualties

Navy Announcement Brings Total Since Pearl Harbor to 15,814

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—The navy issued its fifteenth casualty list of the war today, reporting 408 men from forty-three states and Hawaii, killed, wounded or missing.

Most of these casualties, said the navy, resulted from combat with the enemy, but the list included also a few lost in accidents at sea or in the air on duty directly connected with war operations.

Some of those listed as missing, the navy said, may have been rescued at sea or landed at isolated spots from which they could not communicate with naval officials.

The list covered navy and marine corps, but not coast guard personnel, and included men from all states except Delaware, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota and Wyoming.

The list—194 dead, 142 wounded and seventy-two missing—brought to 15,814 the total casualties announced since the start of the war for the navy, marine corps and coast guard—Navy: 3,788 dead, 1,069 wounded, 7,752 missing; marine corps, 630 dead, 515 wounded, 1,896 missing; coast guard, 35 dead, nine wounded, 120 missing.

Flood Problem

ernment in the condition of the Potomac river has increased through the location this year, of 60,000 permanent office spaces on the lowland of the Virginia side of the river between Washington and the Arlington cemetery. This year's flood was so bad that two of the four bridges were declared unsafe and one of the pontoon bridges was washed out entirely. The radio and press were busy telling the government workers how to reach their offices by upland routes. The activity of the federal government in Virginia was considerably dislocated for several days.

"Since the 1936 flood the government has spent $2,800,000 buying the right of way of the old C. and O. canal for park and other improvements. Much of the work done in the twenty-five miles of the canal bed nearest Washington was washed out this year, as that entire section of the canal and adjacent Montgomery county farms were entirely flooded.

"The state of Maryland and the state of West Virginia should be expected to bear a part of this program should federal funds fail to meet the entire charge," Col. Lee suggested. "These floods along the Potomac are not local matters. They damage the property and threaten the lives of thousands of Maryland and West Virginia citizens. Menaces of this kind are generally considered as state and national programs, and the people of Western Maryland, should, in my opinion, appeal or look to federal and state relief from this periodical menace."

Other Sections Affected

"Extensive local treatments of river conditions along this section of the Potomac may well make flood conditions worse along other sections of the river, and for this reason alone, the proposition must be considered in its entirety," Col. Lee added.

It was also Col. Lee's well considered opinion that the immediate requirement is capable and extensive planning for the entire flood control project, so that everything can be ready to begin work on a permanent control plan when the war is over and 10,000,000 men are released from military service. Because at that time, he predicted, "the United States will embark on the largest reconstruction program this country has ever seen."

Two young soldiers, David Corbin and Ray W. Kirby, were sent up for 18 months for robbing Charles Wilt while he was asleep in his auto on the highway near McCoole. Both soldiers were AWOL from a Tennessee army camp at the time of the robbery, and Corbin had been in court before for robbing the Western Maryland station at McCoole. Last week, Judge Sloan said, the court contacted the soldiers commanding officer to see if the army wanted them back. The answer was that the Army had no further use for them.

Slider Fined $50

Convicted of simple assault on charges preferred by Lloyd Metz, Alonzo Slider, proprietor of a roadside lunch stand near Oldtown, was fined $50.

Paroles were placed on Rush Daily for forgery, and on William T. Hayden, for stealing money entrusted to him for deposit in a bank by his employer, a local merchant. Hayden's parole is contingent upon his restoring the amount he had spent from the money, about $20 out of $200.

The court said that if there was any disappointment to the Lippold brothers it was their fault and the fault of no one else, and since there was no irregularity at the sale and nothing else shown why the sale should be set aside, the court dismissed the exceptions.

Senate Leaders Blame Roosevelt For Farm Prices

Say Stabilization Heads Act under Him in Evading Law

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—The explosive farm price issue erupted again today in the form of angry charges and denials that James P. Byrnes and other stabilization officials had "taken the law into their own hands" and fixed agricultural ceilings lower than Congress intended.

At a session of the Senate Agriculture committee, farm state senators complained bitterly that benefit payments the government pays to farmers had been included in the computations of "parity"—thus making the parity ceilings too low.

Henderson Angry

Byrnes, the economic stabilization director, replied that the action was based on a presidential order, and that the order was founded on a fair interpretation of the price control law. In addition, Price Administrator Leon Henderson served notice that the practice would be continued, and that he would not let himself be ousted without a fight.

He said he had heard that some senators were "out to get me" and added:

O'Leary Predicts More Rationing If War Continues

Doctor of Philosophy Looks Ahead "A Couple of Years"

By STERLIN GREEN
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Paul M. O'Leary, the plain-spoken doctor of philosophy who runs rationing for Leon Henderson, gives warning that Americans are in for "a lot more rationing if the war lasts a couple of years longer."

He declined to discuss the current problem—child, coffee, but made it clear that the Office of Price Administration, of which he is deputy administrator for rationing, would not hesitate to ration it, if necessary, just because it might be considered a luxury or because it contained caffeine.

No Distinctions Made

"We're not making semi-moralistic distinctions between necessary foods and so-called luxury foods," the former economics professor from Cornell said in an interview. "We don't feel that it's our business to tell people what they should eat and drink."

This philosophy of O'Leary's prevailed in sugar rationing. OPA was under great pressure to curtail allotments to beverage bottlers and give more to bakers, but O'Leary pointed out that the supply was not being cut "anywhere near the nutritional danger level—so we're not deciding whether a man should eat a cream puff or drink a bottle of soda pop."

Must Conserve Sugar

One principle did guide the sugar rationing problem. No food which was more important than sugar as a food should go to waste. Therefore, ruled the rationing boss, all the sugar necessary to preserve fruits, vegetables and meats goes to the canners and packers; the rest is divided up among household consumers and industrial users.

O'Leary, who works in shirt-sleeves in a temporary building three blocks from Henderson's headquarters, think he has one problem licked. That's the problem of having to do a "firehouse job of rationing," as he calls it, on some commodity which may suddenly prove scarce.

34 Bills Ready For Introduction In Next Assembly

Thirty-Four Others Await Approval of Maryland Council

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26 (AP)—Thirty-four proposed bills have been drafted by the Maryland legislative council and are ready for introduction in the General Assembly next January while thirty-four others have been prepared and await final council approval, Governor O'Connor reports.

He gave no details about any of the measures.

The governor's statement was based upon a report made through Dr. Horace E. Plack, director of research for the council.

O'Connor said the thirty-four proposals ready for introduction included "those relating to the criminal law, testamentary law, provisions affecting the department of labor and statistics, relating to the employment of minors; amending the workmen's compensation law, affecting small loan licensees, advertising for road construction and measures relating to life, accident and health insurance laws."

as yet without final approval, "relate to installment sales, insurance companies, land record office, grand juries, the state comptroller's office, criminal law, traffic court of Baltimore city, State Department of Public Welfare, exemption of personal property of manufacturers and regarding bequests and conveyances," the governor's statement said.

Dr. Plack also reported to O'Connor that research reports have been prepared and issued on tobacco marketing in Maryland, industrial life insurance in the state, public school system, experience rating in unemployment compensation, tax sales in the state, filing and publication of administrative rules and regulations.

He also said studies have been made regarding self insurance of state property, the power of the bank commissioner to remove bank officials, state aid and support of higher education in the state and building and loan associations.

These reports are expected to be issued soon.

Governor O'Connor commended the council's work as "the most forward-looking legislative development in this generation" and added:

O'Connor Pleased

"The fact that such a number of proposals are completed more than two months before the convening of the legislature is phenomenal. This accomplishment more than justifies the creation of the council because it gives assurance that thorough study and consideration are given to these important matters, thus preventing hasty and ill-considered attention."

"I cannot commend too highly the members of the council, both democrats and republicans, who have labored dutifully during the two years between sessions (of the General Assembly) in the interest of the state."

Miller Deserves Republican Support

THERE IS no good reason why Republicans of this county and district should not vote in the election Tuesday for Leo H. Miller, of Hagerstown, for Fourth circuit associate judge. He is the regularly elected Republican nominee and as such is entitled to the full support of all members of the party.

Democrats who are supporting their party nominee for judge have been desperately trying to alienate Republicans in this contest. Much has been made of a petition signed by a majority of the lawyers of Washington county asking that Miller's opponent be elected chiefly because he happens to be the sitting judge.

So far as this newspaper has been able to ascertain, two things lie back of that petition.

One is nothing more nor less than professional jealousy. Miller is a man of dynamic personality, energetic, active, alert—a go-getter and a doer. He demonstrated these characteristics in notable manner when seeking the judicial nomination and surprised his less aggressive opponents by the fine support he rolled up. He has also made his mark in the legal field by the exercise of the same characteristics, and this largely accounts for the jealousy that has naturally arisen.

There has been a sly whispering campaign about this man, but it has fallen flat among those who know him because it has no basis in fact. Some of the most prominent and influential citizens and business men of Washington county have expressed themselves as resentful that such a whispering campaign should have been attempted. They declare that Miller is a man of unimpeachable integrity and of exceptional legal ability, and point to the fact that he is counsel for a large number of the leading business and banking concerns of his county. Now if he were not qualified so as to deserve this trust and confidence, certainly those concerns would not retain him as counsel.

Another thing to be said about this petition business is that usually it is a thing forced under unfair advantage. A prospect will be pulled away from his work, backed up into a corner, asked for his signature and one signs it either to please the solicitor as a matter of friendship or in order to get rid of him.

While a big play is being made here about supporting sitting judges regardless of the need for continuing our two-party system, the idea would command more respect if those advocating it were a bit more consistent about it. Here the Democrats are stressing that argument with all their might. But in other jurisdictions, where they happen to have a candidate for a judgeship on their own party ticket in opposition to a sitting judge, then they forget all about this argument. They are not for the sitting judge then, but for their own candidate. This, of course, is a horse of a different color.

Galen L. Tait, Republican state chairman, has directed attention to this inconsistency in calling upon Governor O'Connor to "come clean" with respect to the Sixth judicial circuit. "In order to judge whether Governor O'Connor is more sincere and consistent in this than in his solemn pledge in 1938 to serve but one term," Tait says, "let him state now publicly and positively whether he is supporting re-election in the Sixth judicial circuit sitting Chief Judge Edward S. Deleplaine, of Frederick, against whom W. Clinton McSherry, a member of the notorious state liquor appeal board, is running as a nominee of the governor's party."

Of course, the Democratic administration and the local Democratic organizations in that district will support the Democratic nominee. This is another one of those cases where the horse is of another color.

As stated, Republicans of this county and district owe their support to their judicial nominee, Leo H. Miller, of Hagerstown, and from all indications they will give it unreservedly. Democrats, as well as Republicans who are trying to be duped by the Democrats, should paste it in their hats right now that Miller will be the next associate judge. And no sound reason obtains why he should not be.

The Real Meaning Of Navy Day

"NAVY DAY this year means more than at any time in our history. It is a day on which we can rededicate our best efforts to our common cause, as we pay just tribute to the brave men of our fleet who are taking the battle to the enemy. Every American is proud of those men—they have earned every American's utmost gratitude."

That statement was made by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox recently in keeping with the observance on October 27 of the services given by the men of the navy, marine corps and coast guard.

Navy day does mean more today than at any time in the history of our country. It means more than speeches, rallies, flag displays and parades. It means that the sad and true facts of the war are being laid in our laps, and that the war is no distant, incomprehensible affair raging on foreign shores involving only strangers.

The war has reached our shores. Enemy shells have crashed into the United States, and enemy torpedoes have exploded in the heart of our commercial shipping, tossing debris upon our beaches.

Keeping faith with the nation, the slogan for the fleet now is "Your Navy—First Line of Attack."

It has always been so, ever since the navy first dared to challenge the might of the British fleet and finally carried the flag throughout the world to show that for America the seas were free.

Although deep in meaning, Navy day itself is fairly new, having been started in 1922. October 27 was selected because it was the birth date of President Theodore Roosevelt, who always demanded a fleet large enough to keep the country free from attacks by other nations.

It was also in October, 1775, that the Continental Congress voted in favor of setting up an armed naval force to be under the control of the government.

The fleet was of vital importance to the new-born nation then, and has been of increasing importance to the United States of America through the wars with Tripoli, with Mexico, Spain, the Boxer Rebellion and the conflict with the Central powers in the World war.

Today the fleet stands in the front lines of the nation, and the nation must stand behind the fleet.

Navy day this year should serve to urge men to lend their services to the navy, to urge civilians to build for victory and to urge everyone to invest as much as possible in War bonds.

Battlewagons Still Useful

REGARDLESS of the extent to which battleships may have fallen into disrepute in America, everyone interested in prosecution of the war will be pleased that Britain has two new 35,000-ton battlewagons on the high seas, eager to deal properly with Hitler's Tirpitz if and when that pride of the German navy again leaves its northern rathole for the purpose of raiding Allied convoys en route to Russia.

Battleships today obviously require not only the protection of other naval vessels but also an adequate curtain of air power. But their ability to polish off war vessels of smaller tonnage and range is as great as ever. It is well known that the Germans, from time to time in the First World war and in the current conflict, have sent out as surface raiders converted merchant vessels, carrying heavy guns and competent to raise havoc with convoys. The British on numerous occasions have succeeded in bringing these raiders to book, and fast battleships can do the trick with a minimum of effort.

A. V. Alexander, the first lord of the admiralty, has stressed the necessity of maintaining convoys and control of the sea if the Allies are to open a second front. The role of the British battleship in achieving this objective should not be overlooked.

Hitler fires six more of his high ranking generals, we read. And once again we're reminded of that old proverb: "A poor workman always blames his tools."

The fact that the Kaiser escaped hanging and lived in luxurious exile in Holland should not comfort Hitler. The Kaiser didn't attack Holland.

With girls outnumbering men six to one in Washington, less attractive dames may be coming out strong for date rationing.

That Gingko Tree

By MARSHALL MASLIN

There was a Gingko Tree in our garden and it was a great disappointment.

A quaint little tree with tender, shaggy leaves on it, modest and decorative. Quite different from other trees in looks, but not in conduct.

That's just the point. It disappointed because it WAS like other trees. . . . We were told when we planted it that it lost all its leaves in a single night. The little green leaves came forth in the spring and grew larger and larger and the small green tree carried them gracefully through the summer until a certain day in the autumn. . . . And then one night, while we were sleeping, the tree would lose its hold on its green leaves and they'd flutter to the earth. At twilight you'd see your tree in full green leaf; at dawn it would be bare, bereft, stripped.

It seemed interesting to have such a tree in our yard. We could watch it, wonder about it, speculate on why it was different from other trees, and tell visitors about our strange Gingko Tree.

All fiction, all fantasy. Not true. Our Gingko Tree was like any other tree. . . . Its leaves did NOT drop in a single night. They dropped gradually as other leaves do. One by one. Two by two. The tree held them as long as it could, reluctantly let them go. The Gingko was like our oaks and our maples and our green bay tree. . . . Nothing to talk about except that it wasn't. It may be different in other countries, in China where it is native, but not in our yard.

Sometimes you hear of human beings who, suddenly, in a night become new and strange. Drop all their old ways, change their habits, their weaknesses, their strengths, their beauty, their ugliness, become like wild swans or repulsive toads and are reborn in other form. People DON'T do that. They take on new leaves, new habits, slowly; they drop the old leaves, the old ways, little by little. Like the Gingko Tree we thought was so different.

But we didn't mind about our Gingko Tree. . . . After all, natural growth in trees or in people seems better to me than magical and mysterious change.

Solomon Islands Job Is for Navy, Lawrence Explains

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—The national capital is seething with rumors and reports about friction between the armed services, and seems particularly addicted to a long smoldering piece of gossip that Gen. MacArthur has been put on the shelf or exiled in Australia because of a fear that his prestige and prowess might be converted into a presidential candidacy for 1944 on the Republican ticket.

This type of thing, vicious in its effects, inside and outside the armed services has been ignored so far as public demand is concerned and it is most regrettable that reports of that kind do gain such headway that something has to be said about them.

First of all, if Gen. MacArthur and more units of the United States army are not participating in the Solomon Islands operation any more extensively than has already been announced, the responsibility lies with Gen. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army. It is his duty as a member of our triumvirate high command consisting of himself, Adm. King and Adm. Leahy to speak up for the army and insist on its participation if he thinks it wise.

But anybody who knows the simplest facts of military and naval strategy knows that the job of taking the Solomons and making them secure is a naval task and that once the navy and the marines have achieved that job reinforcements or replacement forces from the army can substitute for the marines who are then able to proceed to occupy other islands and bases. But protection for the transports carrying the new forces some 1,300 miles overseas is also a job for our navy, of limited size in the Pacific.

The reason why Gen. MacArthur's forces have not been landed in greater number is that the seas in and around the Solomons are not yet in our control and that's the navy's problem just now. So far as reports of a divided authority or command are concerned, these are based on a misunderstanding, too. For Adm. Nimitz at Hawaii commands the entire Pacific area, insofar as the waters of that ocean are concerned outside of Australia. He commands activities in the sea lanes approaching Australia and any and all islands in the Pacific.

Since the main job at the moment is naval it is fitting that a high naval officer should be in command of army air and sea forces. The Japanese navy has been in command of every single operation relating to the East Indies and Java and including the attacks on Australia by aircraft from land bases in New Guinea.

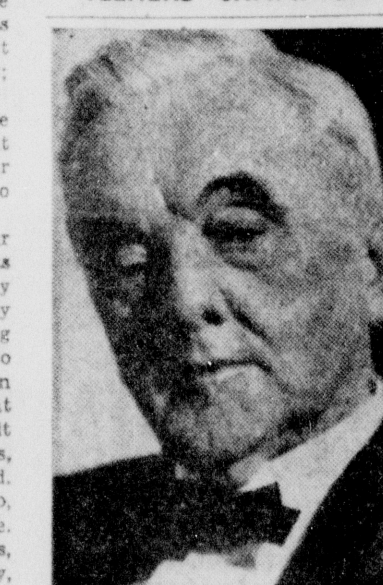

Gen. MacArthur reports directly to Gen. Marshall and if the latter, sitting in daily conference with Adm. King and Adm. Leahy, sees a chance for the army to come in and supplement the navy's operations this will be done. Gen. MacArthur isn't being shelved at all but the time has not come for him to assume command of military operations because the navy has not yet acquired any big bases or the approaches to any new land areas for him to command.

Now the chief difficulty of the moment and one to which severe criticism has properly been directed is the navy's tactics in and around the Solomons. Adm. Nimitz at Hawaii has delegated this to Vice Adm. Gormley who made his headquarters in New Zealand. Adm. Nimitz flew to the Solomons recently and made an investigation and the announcement last Saturday afternoon of the removal of both Adm. Gormley and his task force commander, Adm. Pye, is the sequel.

Significant Dispatch

No official explanation has been given as to the reasons for the removal of these two admirals but Hanson Baldwin, military expert of the New York Times, who has just returned from the Solomons and

TEENERS' CHAMPION

Swift passage of the teen-age draft bill was held up by a powerful minority bloc led by Senator George W. Norris, 81, Nebraska. He offered a rider to the bill prohibiting the use of men under twenty in combat zones until they had undergone a year's training on American soil.

presumably was there about the same time as Adm. Nimitz wrote a significant dispatch which was printed the morning before the change in the naval command in the South Pacific was made public.

"The bad chapters of our Solomons operations followed hard upon the heels of the initial landing," he wrote in part. "The Astoria, Quincy, Vincennes and Canberra were sunk in a night action with a division of Japanese cruisers two days after the initial landings were made. Our ships were surprised like sitting ducks; none of them had a chance to get off more than a few ineffective salvos. They were surprised despite the fact that a report sent by one of our planes of the approach of the Japanese cruisers had been received the afternoon prior to night action."

"They were surprised, first, because they had assumed a defensive station, patrolling back and forth over a fixed course in narrow waters and awaiting the enemy instead of going out to attack him. They were surprised, second, because their disposition enabled the enemy to approach almost within gun range without detection; and third because only a small part of their crews were at battle stations when the action started and fourth because the admiral in command of the northern cruiser screen had left the scene in his flagship and judging from the Navy department's communique no one had succeeded him in actual tactical command."

Change Weeks Ago

There's the gist of what undoubtedly happened last August and apparently the change in command took place some weeks ago so that our present naval operations are being conducted by men in whom the high command has more confidence.

The Solomon Islands operation has rightly been a "navy show" from the start but there are army and marine fliers and ground crews now participating under the unified command of Adm. Halsey. He is responsible for defending the approaches to the Solomons and in fact the whole South Pacific area because in its present shape this war in the Pacific is still a battle between navies.

Some Progress Is Reported

From the Pittsburgh Press.

A committee investigating red tape as it affected the War Production Board has hacked away a considerable portion of it, according to a report from Production Chief Donald M. Nelson.

The investigators have eliminated 120 WPB office forms as unnecessary, and 132 more have been improved and simplified. Furthermore, the committee has established a control over issuance of additional forms.

Now if all those people who used to sit around thinking up unnecessary forms are given useful tasks to do, and if all the WPB clerks whose time was occupied filling out the needless forms are transferred to jobs related to winning the war, we'll be making headway.

Everybody Lives Through Profits, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—The mail laid out on my desk daily seems to me to furnish a more interesting cross section of public opinion than a national poll. All shades of opinion are expressed there on every subject.

A Salem, Ore. auto dealer, Paul B. Wallace, for example, sent me a clipping of a reader's letter in one paper out there, protesting sharply against my advocacy of a profits system.

This reader took the view that the profits system had broken down in the depression, that it was "corrupt, unequal, unfair, and that we were going to have a new and better system of some kind after the war. Mr. Wallace was exasperated about the matter and asked me to answer.

A single attempt at conscientious thought by that reader, or anyone else, would convince him that we all live by profits—laborer, farmer, clerk and business man. I think it is the Communists who attempt to convince such people that profits are ugly and immoral.

Numerically Few
Of course, there are not enough Communists in this country to make any substantial political difference, except in one respect—the extent to which they induce good Americans to distrust democracy and our capitalist system.

It is unfortunate that many established leaders express beliefs, not thoroughly clarified, which inadvertently put water on the wheel of the Communist theory. Many good advocates of democracy have in the past publicly espoused causes which led people to believe that profits are repugnant.

They did so for their own purposes, of course, political and otherwise—and they did not espouse Communist purposes—but they did leave in the minds of some people, perhaps in the mind of the reader who wrote that letter, that there is something distasteful in profits.

Only unfair profits are immoral, as everyone knows. Only creating and gouging are the vicious problems. Fair profits are the life blood of all democratic systems, and the indispensable sustenance of democracy.

Hanson Wrong
Another reader in Jacksonville, Fla., H. A. Hanson, took the position that may also be accepted by some other people that this is "the rich man's war and the poor man's fight."

He is wrong. The rich are actually being abolished, both in Britain and the United States. No new rich class is being created by it, or can be created, in view of the taxes.

I think the war is a fight of each citizen of every class except one—those who would prefer to live under the Japs and Hitler than Roosevelt.

Two Ways To Think
Many readers have protested my campaign against hates, that is domestic hates among ourselves. Mr. D. H. Butler, of the H. J. Heinz Company, Pittsburgh, however, wrote:

"If you could demonstrate to people that there are only two possible ways for men to think, either idealistic or the belief in freedom as the basis for creating the greatest wealth for the greatest number; or materialistic, the belief that wealth can be divided among the people, then you will have started these thinking people on the path of constructive thought."

There is no wealth in division. Wealth today is the ability to produce, to earn. Divide the Ford factory and General Motors or otherwise destroy their ability to produce and what have you except brick and machines for scrap sales? Each man then could get a brick from them, or a piece of a machine, or the pittance their sale would bring at junk yard prices.

Their ability to produce is their only wealth, and the only wealth of you or me. And I think ambitious private management can make them produce better than political management by the government.

The Negro Problem

My effort to bring some constructive realism into the hotly divided problem of the negro met an approving response from all except one negro reader, who thought it proved me "a biased, senseless, mechanical parrot."

Obviously, she is thinking along the familiar theory that the way to improve the economic and social status of the negro is to break down law barriers.

There is bitterness on both sides of this question. The white and the negro, and not without some justification.

But the problem will never be solved until the bitterness is dropped and negro leaders can set an excellent example to their people, and the white leaders to theirs, by fair and straight thinking.

There are good and bad on both sides, which causes each to look at the other as a whole with unjustified suspicion.

Best solution would be to meet on a new common ground of realism, shedding both bitterness and politics, for the institution of a program which would give the negro the fullest opportunity to advance himself socially and economically—and end political handling of the problem.

American Air Power Dealing Terrific Blows

J. S. Aviators Taking Leading Part on Every Front

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
A. P. Staff Writer

Three days after the onset of the British offensive in Egypt reports remain both too meagre and too general to trace its trends except in one respect.

The exception, nevertheless, is significant and clear-cut. It is all the more important because it follows a pattern that now characterizes every other front of the global war except in Russia.

In North Africa and the Mediterranean, in Western Europe, in the Pacific from the Aleutians to the Solomon Islands, and in China from the Burma to the Manchurian border, American air power is making itself felt. American heavy bombers are striking telling blows at long range at Axis foes on all those fronts. American-made planes manned by British or other crew form another important segment of the ever widening Allied air attack.

Air Power Major Factor

There seems no doubt from first accounts of the Egyptian offensive and the parallel British trans-Continental bombing of the northern Italian targets that Allied air superiority is a major factor in the situation. It could prove the decisive factor not in North Africa alone, but also in shaping the course of the war in Russia.

There is no other source than Russia from which the Axis could shift plane strength to the Egyptian front quickly enough to meet the crisis for Rommel indicated by unofficial estimates of a five-to-one Allied air superiority in North Africa. Italian planes are too urgently needed at home against the sustained dark-and-daylight raiding by the British in northern Italy. That is an important by-product of those raids of which war industries and shipping destined to supply the Africa corps are the prime targets.

Nazis Face Problem

Any heavy withdrawal of German air strength from Russia inevitably must force a Nazi halt short of winter line objectives. It might even come so close to evening the odds in the Stalingrad and Central Caucasus zones as to force a wide general German retreat from too exposed positions.

Early front line press reports passed by censors in Egypt show the British have driven, under an air umbrella, relatively narrow corridors through Rommel's mine-fields and gun defenses to an undisclosed depth. Held open by following infantry, they have been used to pass heavy tank elements through to positions in rear of the Axis forward line deployed on the irregular El Alamein-Qattara depression line. All accounts agree that Rommel's main armored strength is coming up, harried by British-American planes, for a crucial tank battle.

That represents a slow-moving frontal attack for the British. The narrowness of the Egyptian bottleneck, between the sea and depression, makes sweeping flanking operations by tank fleets all but impossible.

There was a curious note in the first British announcement of the combined sea, air and land attack which initiated the offensive last Friday night. Naval bombardment of Matruh was one phase. American

TODAY'S THE DAY ALL U. S. SALUTES ITS NAVY

This year, more than ever before, Americans have reason to show pride in their gallant Navy which has done such a magnificent job against far-flung enemy forces. Pictured are a United States battleship firing its big guns, an American aircraft carrier, the explosion of a depth charge, deadly menace to Hitler's prowling U-boats, and a group of American sailors, the finest afloat.

can-built "light" surface craft being mentioned as having participated.

Report Repulse of British

Terse Axis bulletins claim that repulse of the British attack without details as to strictly land operations. They do note, however, that at Matruh an Allied attempt to land forces 100 miles in the rear of Rommel's front from what appeared to be commando power type landing barges. The effort was defeated and one such barge sunk by gunfire, Rome and Berlin said. The British reference to "light" American-built surface craft might be explained by that Axis claim.

Even if the Matruh action was only a bombardment to cripple Rommel's communications and supply lines, however, Allied air and sea control offers at least a chance for waterborne flank attacks along the coast.

Whiskey Placed On Ration List

But It's Distillers, Not Government Behind Order

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26 (AP)—A spokesman for Maryland distillers—producers of a good share of the country's alcohol—made it known today that nationwide whiskey rationing was already in effect.

The present program is based on restrictions to dealers but the distillers' spokesman, Donald Hammond, executive secretary of the Association of Maryland Distillers, hinted of even sharper controls. He advocated consumption limits in addition to supply quotas.

If such limits weren't imposed, Hammond continued, whiskey consumption would jump from 50 to 100 per cent.

"The whiskey could be sold because 'the buying power of the public has increased tremendously' but there was less whiskey to be sold, he said, because the alcohol-producing facilities were now turning out alcohol for the war effort.

Increased taxes, Hammond explained, "are not going to stop the increased buying unless the supply is rationed."

This brings the distillers hard up against a situation where greatly increased sales would exhaust present warehouse stocks in three years, throwing the stocks back to 1933 when whiskey "was not what it is now" regardless of the price.

The present rationing system, Hammond continued, calls for reduced supplies to various areas by different percentages in accordance with the excess demand in a given region. In addition, some brands have been discontinued.

Thus, he explained, there would be bigger reductions in war industry areas such as Baltimore—where the demand has rocketed—than in non-industrial areas where there has been no appreciable rise.

At present, there are 529,089,000 gallons of whiskey in the nation's warehouses.

Kaylor Suggests Use Of Wood for Heating

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26 (AP)—State Forester Joseph F. Kaylor today said he was studying measures for using eastern shore "waste" wood to relieve the fuel oil and firewood shortage elsewhere throughout the state.

Many families, Kaylor added, have installed small wood-burning heaters in their homes to supplement furnaces, run on war-depleted stocks of fuel oil. The sudden demand for firewood has caused a shortage in most lumber yards, he said.

Wood, Kaylor explained, is more bulky than other materials and its land transportation, especially in these times of transport curtailment, is generally limited to within forty-five miles of the source of production.

A number of small schooners and other freight craft, however, journey often to the Eastern Shore area, loaded with fertilizer and other supplies needed by the farmers there. "What I would like to have them do," he said, "is to bring back each time a load of firewood."

Medieval Moderns

RENAISSANCE HAIRDO. Raphael styled this one.

By BETTY CLARKE
Wide World Beauty Editor

Miss America is a busy woman these days. During the Renaissance the ladies fought alongside their men too. One of them, Isabella of Castille, for example, made a vow not to change her clothes until the siege against her lord's fortress was broken. (Perhaps the first "frozen silhouette" on record.)

All the paintings of the Renaissance at the Metropolitan Museum of Art show the wide calm forehead, the serene knowing eyes, the graceful contour of face and neck of the beauties of that day. One expert in the field of beauty, upon seeing "portrait of a Lady," attributed to Raphael, created his ideal modern girl.

1942 VERSION. Smooth center part does the trick.

with the same courageous glance and dignity of bearing.

Simple to do yourself and right for your busy life are his rules for a Renaissance makeup. Keep your coloring in one plane by using the same foundation on neck and face. Use absolutely no rouge. (Few girls can do this without looking ill.) Outline the natural contours of your lips with a brush and then fill in, taking care to leave them thin at the outer edges. Accent your lashes heavily toward the corners, keeping your brows broad with a good oval sweep. If your face is perfectly shaped, a middle part is the best. Otherwise part your hair wherever it seems most becoming and let it lie smooth over your temples.

done for around $20,000 and should be started at once.

Police Commissioner Orr expressed the opinion that the Western Maryland bridge near Baltimore street provides one of the greatest barriers to the flow of the stream. He suggested that the bridge be constructed so it can be raised on a swing and then water would not back up so readily when Wills Creek swells.

Whiting told the council that the problem is the city's problem and that the mayor and council as the representatives and the executives of the corporation must take the initiative. He stated the citizens can do nothing unless the council takes the lead and takes the action.

McKaig's Paper Read

He also presented a paper prepared by W. Wallace McKaig in which flood conditions over a period of years were outlined. He listed the Western Maryland railway as being responsible for six, the State Roads Commission responsible for two and the city responsible for one. It was suggested that removal of these obstructions would lessen danger from floods.

Daniel F. McMullen, chairman of local War Price and Rationing Board No. 1-1, was notified by telegram yesterday that the scheduled registration of fuel oil and kerosene dealers Oct. 27 and 28 has been postponed for several days at least.

This is the second postponement of the registration because forms to be used in the registration have not been received by the local ration board. Delays in printing and distribution are causing the postponement.

NATIONAL G. O. P. COMMITTEEMAN SEES BEALL AS WINNER

HAGERSTOWN—(Special to the NEWS)—Before leaving here Saturday night for Washington, Edward F. Colladay, member of the Republican National Committee for twenty-four years, said:

"After a thorough study of the situation in the Sixth congressional district I predict that J. Glenn Beall, Republican, will win by a comfortable margin."

Colladay said that Republicans would elect at least 200 members of the House and there was a possibility that the party would have a majority.

The National committee member declared that he had kept in close touch with the Sixth district for many years and that all signs point to a Republican victory in the congressional race. He paid a high tribute to Beall.

Child Can Learn Self-Reliance, Dr. Myers Says

Parents Can Help Youngsters To Feel Emotionally Secure

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Ever so many young mothers who do an almost perfect job in managing the baby and young child while alone with him—talking constantly to him, answering all his questions, making him feel emotionally secure—come to discover by and by a serious problem with him when other adults appear and attempt to engage her in conversation in the presence of the child. This youngster might even feel that his father is an intruder when he comes home. So dependent has the child become on the mother for all his emotional satisfaction that he expects as much attention from her when others are present as when he is with her alone.

Vividly Described

This sort of problem is vividly described in the following letter:

"You have given such good advice to others, I hope you may be able to help me with the distressing problem my daughter, nearly three years old, has developed," she writes.

"A friend of mine, a neighbor, drops in to see me frequently, and 'Don't come up here' or 'Don't talk to her, mommy.' I have tried ignoring it, but when I do she persists in saying 'I want her to go home' or 'Don't talk to her' to such a degree that conversation is impossible. I have shut her up in her room and made her sit in a chair after which she will promise not to do it again—but she will repeat the performance the next visit. She has also started greeting her father the same way on his arrival home in the evening—but soon forgets it after he's been home a short while.

"If you can help me with this most embarrassing problem, I will be most grateful. I enclose a stamped, addressed envelope."

Solving the Problem

As I write this mother, she needs to get away from her too soon and then for short periods, leaving her with someone else. She might begin by leaving her with the father and later with some other person who has cared for her in the mother's presence.

Association Help

She also needs to get her with other children her age and to let her learn to entertain herself more. To this end, she may succeed gradually as she finds ways to encourage her to play with blocks and other toys, scribble, draw, and color with crayons. The mother should express great delight at her child's efforts at creation. She even may find it necessary to write out a schedule, post it and follow it, whereby she will keep herself too busy for short periods of ten or fifteen minutes, then longer ones, to stop and amuse

Road to Romance

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO
"YOU WHAT?" Mary asked. Fran gave a sleepy laugh and crossed the kitchen to take the milk bottle from Mary's hand. "Don't drop it," she rebuked. "Milk went up another cent today."

"What did you mean, you saved Toinette Vaughn's life?" Mary demanded. "Fran, you can be the most exasperating!"

"It's my dramatic instinct," said Fran. "Close the ice box door, honey. Electricity's gone up, too. I said I saved Toinette Vaughn's life today and what I meant was I saved Toinette Vaughn's life today." She poured milk into a saucer and set it carefully on the gas range.

Mary pulled herself up to her favorite listening post on the sink. "You have a very funny sense of loyalty to your friends," she said. "You promised me you'd spit in her eye."

"I meant to, honest I did," mourned Fran. "In fact, I think I'd started across with that intention in mind."

Mary waved a wild arm toward the stove. "Boiling," she screamed. "It's boiling over. Remember, milk's gone up."

Fran poured the milk into glasses, rummaged for graham crackers and perched on the table near Mary. "Where shall I begin the brave tale?" she asked.

"Right from the beginning," sighed Mary. "I might as well get all the details."

Fran took a bite of her cracker and plunged into her tale. It had happened about 3 o'clock, she guessed. There were about 50 extras on the set in party dresses, and rented tuxes. All the lights were going full blast for the big ball scene. "It's really a spectacle," Fran cried, enthused. "You'll have to come out on the set with me some day. Marble pillars that look so real you'd swear they'd been hewn right out of the cliffs. And a winding stairway that goes right to your southern heart. And a whole trainload of the most gorgeous growing wisteria vines."

"She broke off with sudden dismay. 'I forgot to water the garden!'"

Mary slid off the sink and filled a water pitcher. "Come on," she said. "We can clean the house, too, before you get to the point of your story."

"Where was I?" Fran wondered, as she followed Mary to the balcony.

"On the set of 'Always in My Heart," said Mary, as she poured water into the window box. "Admiring the balcony scenery."

"Oh, yes," Fran picked up the story. "Well—as I said, there were millions of extras dancing . . . and about ten million are lights on them and all the cameras grinding. It was almost time for my specialty, I knew, and I was sitting all by myself trying to keep my teeth from chattering too loudly. They made their way back to the kitchen as Fran chatted on.

"Then the director yelled 'Cut!'"

"Then a man held up a board with numbers on it, didn't he?" Mary interrupted.

"Yep. Then I heard the director calling for my specialty act, and I knew my time had come. I started for the orchestra platform. On the way I had to pass Toinette. She was at a table with the leading man and a couple of feature players in a game of gin rummy."

Mary swallowed the last of her hot milk. "Go on," she urged impatiently. "Don't stop there!"

"Well," Fran took another bite of graham cracker. "A prop man was just ahead of me carrying a bench to the conservatory set. He was in a hurry because he wanted to get it set up before the cameras started. And he knocked it against one of the big lights. I saw the light swaying, but I didn't think it was going over at first—not until some little extra girl yelled! Then I looked up and saw it on its way down, going hell bent for leather, right for Toinette's beautiful head."

Mary whistled softly. "What did you do?"

"I jumped for her, got hold of her arm and yanked her out of her chair half a second before the lamp hit the chair. It crashed across the chair and broke it into six pieces."

"Fran—that was wonderful!"

"I shall regret it to my dying day," Fran insisted.

"Then what happened?"

"Oh, nothing. They called a ten-minute rest period and we all went over to the commissary and got coffee."

"I mean," Mary prodded, "what did she say to you? Didn't she even thank you?"

"Not then," Fran climbed off the table yawning. "She was too scared."

"Well, didn't she later?" Mary turned out the kitchen lights as they made their way back to the bedroom. Curiosity about this glamorous star who held Bruce's happiness in her careless grasp forced the question from her.

Fran got into her bed and pulled up the covers before she answered. "Yes, she did," she admitted reluctantly. "After we went back to the set, she said, 'Fran mimicked, 'I want to thank you for what you did. I was too cooped, before. I had to go to my cot-age and lie down. But I want you to have coffee with me tomorrow, will you—in my cot-age?'"

"Oh," Mary slipped into her white silk jersey gown thoughtfully. "So you're going to have coffee with her in her cot-age?"

"I am not," snapped Fran. "Only I couldn't think of a good excuse on the spur of the moment."

She opened one eye and watched Mary brushing her soft, shining mass of hair. "I think I'll tell her I'm radical," she mused, "and I can't waste my time on the upper classes. Or I might just be honest and admit the whole rescue was a mistake and I'd rather forget it."

Mary silently pinned her curls into place and tied a band around them. She went into the bathroom and brushed her teeth. Then she came back, slid into the other bed and pulled the lamp switch. The room darkened. Only an oblong shaft of moonlight slanted in from the window.

Fran raised her head from the pillow and demanded sleepily, "Well, what shall I tell her?"

She looked across at Mary's head propped on her crossed arms, thoughtful gaze on the shaft of moonlight.

"Tell her," Mary said softly, "that you'll be happy to come."

Fran's head jerked up from her pillow indignantly. "I'll do nothing of the sort!" she snorted. "I have no desire to cultivate the acquaintance of her French nips . . . that is, beyond a couple of smacks on that beautiful puss. I wouldn't be caught dead in her cot-age."

"I wouldn't want you to—like her," admitted Mary. "But, honestly, Fran, I'm eaten up with curiosity about her. I suppose," she admitted with a rueful laugh, "I just want to find out what she's got that I haven't. I wish you'd go—and investigate her like Burke investigated the Japs."

Fran laughed. "All right," she capitulated reluctantly. "But I'll try to do a better job."

days lost from trench feet—ring worm—during the last war.

A particularly troublesome form of skin disability is from plain pus infection of the skin. This is natural because in field maneuvers the fingers and fingernail beds are likely to become infected with small abscesses which are transferred to the other parts of the skin by contact and by scratching. So medical officers are particularly alert to treat these apparently trivial infections in their incipency.

Scabies—the itch—we will always have with us probably. And no wonder, if you consider the entrance of the female itch insect. Buxton, of the British army, found that from egg to adult female was an interval of eight days, and she begins to lay eggs twenty-four hours after maturity and lays two eggs a day for fifty days. To compute that requires logarithms rather than the multiplication table. You may think of the itch as a minor annoyance, but it caused the loss of 393,700 active service days in 1917-1919.

Tropical Skin Diseases
In this war troops are in lands with tropical insects and vegetation. The army dermatologist who has been living and practicing peacefully in a country where the worst offenders are chiggers and poison ivy will be compelled to learn a new technique. He must become familiar with Spanish nettle, black palm, mango itch, koong palm, pung-a-pung rash, dumayaka foot, fish-tail lips, dilano and buta-but.

Perhaps after this war the boys will feel that returning to a civilization that provides only eczema and hives will be too tame an existence, and the cream of our dermatologic specialists will be found sitting under coconut trees on some coral atoll, languidly advising a girl in a sarong to put some zinc oxide on her lipany-kalaboa.

Questions and Answers
O. N.—Can a growth in one of the nostrils (caused by a broken nose several years ago) affect one's health in any way by improper breathing?

Answer: It may cause sinus trouble, and chronic infection in the nose and bronchial tubes with asthma.

E. C.—After having my shoulder x-rayed, I find there is a cervical rib. As it is painful I would want to take care of this. Is surgery the only means?

Answer: A cervical rib in an extra rib which occurs in the neck region; it often presses on nerves. With diathermy and electric treatments the symptoms are often kept quiet for years. Surgery should be considered only after careful assessment of all circumstances, and when the symptoms become severe.

Men in Uniform Serving Abroad Come Across Odd Skin Diseases

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

In yesterday's article I referred to the modern conception of dermatology—that the skin is the mirror of the system and the dermatologist of today "an internist who knows the skin."

We are reminded by several recent reports that skin conditions play an important part in the health of our new army, not only the military, but also the industrial workers. Lt. Col. Lehmann calls on dermatologists to be wood soldiers, and while deploring the general state of health found in so many of our young citizens makes a remark that I think is worth quoting just now: "We must first be concerned with removing hell from earth before trying to build a utopia on it."

The army physicians do not have to deal with the chronic or fixed skin conditions because these are culled out in the preliminary examination. But they have plenty of acute skin troubles to deal with. In World War I there were 1,848,900 days lost from active service on account of skin affections, and this war will hardly see any marked reduction.

Infections

In some forms of acute dermatitis the present army medical department is on the alert for prevention. It is hoped that modern treatment will reduce the 97,000

Snyder Gains on Martin in Scoring Chase

Winner in 1941 Trails Leader By Five Points

Camper Fullback Has Best Average--Bridges Ties for Third

Don Snyder, Allegany's flashy fullback who is making a strong bid to retain the city scholastic football scoring championship this season, gained on this year's pacesetter, Robert "Skinny" Martin of Port Hill, when he tallied nine points over the weekend to Martin's one.

The Campobello fullback, who now has the highest average of points per game, scored a touchdown and three extra points as the Alleganyans defeated the Handley High Judges at Winchester, Va. This addition gives Snyder a total of forty-seven points, only five less than Martin, who has played in five games to Snyder's four.

Martin gathered twenty-six of his points in one game--when Port Hill handed Berkeley Springs a 54-0 setback for the highest team score in the city this season. Snyder's best single-game effort was the twenty-two markers he tallied against Ridgeley in Allegany's opening contest.

Snyder's Average Is Best
Martin leads in touchdowns with eight while Snyder is second with six. However, Snyder has scored eleven extra points to Martin's four and is tied with Port Hill's Fred Davis for the most conversions.

Martin, who tallied but one point as the Sentinels bested LaSalle Explorers last Friday, dropped to second place on an average-number-of-points-per-game basis. Snyder has averaged a dozen markers while Martin has averaged between ten and eleven.

The only major change in the picture since last week is in third place. Kenny Bridges, Port Hill halfback, climbed from fourth to a tie with a teammate, "Chesty" Squires, by scoring a touchdown against LaSalle. Each has accounted for five six-pointers in as many games.

Charles "Chick" Kellough and Don Beck, two Allegany aces, remained tied for fifth as each scored a touchdown in the battle with Wally Troutman for a touchdown against LaSalle. The Sentinel end now has twenty-three tallies.

Others in the first ten are Henry Natale, LaSalle, eighth with eighteen; Don Whitman, Port Hill, ninth with fifteen, and Joe Monteleone, Port Hill, tenth with fourteen. In team scoring, Bill Hahn's Port Hill eleven continues to sport the best defensive record while Allegany's offensive figures brand the Campers as the No. 1 city team on the attack.

The Sentinels have blanked five opponents in running up a total of 189 points, an average of thirty-seven and four-fifths per contest. Allegany has tallied a total of 170 markers, an average of forty-two and one-half, but had its goal crossed for the first time last Saturday when Handley scored a touchdown late in the final period. Navy's Gridders Prepare To Meet Irish Saturday

Squad Will Leave for Ohio Thursday with 40 Men Making Trip

By DAVE FRAILEY
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 26 (AP)—Satisfied that they put up a creditable struggle in their losing battle against Georgia Tech, Navy's footballers laid aside memories of this season's victories and defeats and went to work on a future assignment--the formidable one of scuffling with the mighty Irish of Notre Dame.

With virtually only three days to prime for the skirmish at Cleveland, Saturday against the South Bend, Ind., aggregation, the Sailors today commenced a brief but intensive period of workouts.

Following the usual practice routine that precedes games of the Notre Dame calibre, Comdr. John E. Wheelchell, Middle coach, put his men through a heavy scrimmage, and said he would conduct similar sessions tomorrow and Wednesday. A somewhat lighter session probably will be on Thursday's agenda.

Both Tapped Georgia Tech
Capt. L. S. (Pop) Perry, naval academy athletic director, announced that the squad probably would leave for Ohio Thursday night, and that about forty men would make the trip.

It was expected the Midshipmen would arrive in Cleveland in time to hold two more pre-game drills.

In at least one respect, the two teams stand on even ground: Both have been downed previously by the Georgia Techmen. The Irish bounced back, however, to score upsets over the Iowa Seahawks and Illinois.

Navy, on the other hand, had won but two games out of four before meeting the Diesel-powered Engineer attack. One was a victory over the University of Virginia, and the other over Yale. The Navy brand of playing against Georgia Tech was far from slouchy and showed up particularly well in the line.

Irish Ahead in Series
In their fifteen-game series, dating from 1927, the Annapolis men have won only three games and tied none. With a squad that relies heavily on plies and midshipmen are seeing their first season of varsity play, Navy definitely appears the underdog.

But lurking way back in the Sailors' mind is the faint hope they might be able to do to Notre Dame what the Irish did to the Iowa Preflighters.

Wheelchell said he hadn't examined the physician's report today, and wasn't sure about conditions of his injured men. It was thought, however, that most of the squad would be fit for action this weekend.

Stuber Retains

Lead in Scoring

Missouri U. Star Gathers 20 More Points for Total of 83

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP)—Bob Stuber, the human adding machine who plays left halfback for the Missouri university football team, annexed twenty more points Saturday and easily retained his grasp on the nation's scoring honors.

Stuber outsped the Iowa State tacklers for three touchdowns, the day's efforts bringing his total for six games to eighty-three points. His one-day outburst, however, was surpassed by Jim Secrest, Rochester university halfback, who counted five touchdowns, and was approached by All-America Frank Sinkwich of Georgia.

Secrest turned on his speed for the benefit of Hamilton college, which was defeated for the first time this season, 33 to 0, Sinkwich, playing only part time against Cincinnati, got three touchdowns, raised his total to sixty-six points and took over second place.

Uncle Charley Moran's Prayin' Colonels

Upset Harvard 21 Years Ago -- Remember?

By MARC PURDUE
DANVILLE, Ky., Oct. 26 (Wide World)—Centre college still calls its football team the "Prayin' Colonels." It has a new head football coach, new line coach and a squad of thirty-two men.

Centre plays a seven-game schedule this season, and already has lost twice--a 28-6 defeat by Miami University at Oxford, Ohio, and a 21-0 setback by Cincinnati.

Well, all right . . . but look back a generation and drop a tear for the sons of Centre. It was twenty-one years ago . . . remember?

The Prayin' Colonels . . . Bo McMillin . . . Red Roberts . . . Coach C. B. (Uncle Charley) Moran . . . Centre, 6; Harvard, 0.

Same Centre College
Got it now? That was the same Centre college. In its 1921 season, Centre had an unbroken string of victories. St. Xavier, Clemson, V.P.I., Auburn, Washington and Lee and Tulane all went down before this mightiest aggregation of Colonels ever. The climax was the stunning defeat of Harvard, twenty-one years ago on October 29.

The group picture of Centre's 1921 football squad shows a pennant draped over the knees of the boys in the front row. "Centre 6; Harvard, 0," the pennant says.

True enough, the same Prayin' Colonels were trampled by Texas A. and M. in a post-season game at Dallas, 22-14. The dope boys of the period surmised that the Colonels were over-confident in that engagement because of their earlier post-season triumph over Arizona, 38-0, at San Diego. The Aggies had had a tough time with Arizona that year.

The post-season business, however, took none of the lustre from

Red Roberts

Centre's 1921 grid crown. The Prayin' Colonels were on every lip and every sports page.

Here is what Bruce Dudley, then sports editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, had to say in a piece studded with reference to the "miracle team" and "the peerless Bo McMillin":

"Centre's slogan of 1920 was 'score.' It's slogan in 1921 was 'hold them.' Instead of starting the season against weak teams, the Colonels began it with two of their strongest foes--Clemson college and Virginia Polytechnic Institute. In these games, Centre concentrated on defense instead of offense. The result was that the team which had thrilled the country with its offensive skill in 1920 was converted into a machine which thrilled with its defensive merit in 1921.

'Line Beat Harvard'
"Centre's line beat Harvard. The Crimson players were unprepared for such startling transformation. They were coached by McMillin, rated as one of the game's brainiest generals, fooled them. Their expectancy of the pass made a running attack more effective. . . . To McMillin fell the honor of dashing thirty-two yards for the touchdown, though he could not have made that goalward journey but for the superb interference by Red Roberts, who played in three positions that day (Oct. 29, 1921)--end, tackle and fullback. Numerous critics hail Roberts as the game's greatest all-around star."

Dudley observed that, although the Colonels were losing McMillin to a catching job at Centenary College at Shreveport, La., and Captain Armstrong, as well as players James, Murphy and Cregor, were graduating, "so long as Centre has 'Uncle Charley' Moran, Roberts and L. Myers, athletic director, it will have a smart, aggressive team."

Undying Legend

Well, of course, that trio couldn't last forever. Nowadays you may find ardent football fans who never heard of Centre's Prayin' Colonels, but here in Kentucky and probably in many other parts of the country where they performed, the feats of the Colonels of 1921 are among the undying legends of the gridiron.

Laird Holt, University of Tennessee player in the early thirties, is the Centre mentor now. (He'll be in the Navy soon.) The captain is Jack Haddock, of Hopkinsville, Ky. On the 1942 schedule are the University of Cincinnati, Milligan College, Vanderbilt (tentative), Hanover College, Evansville College and the University of Chattanooga.

Whirly Will Win Pimlico Special In a Walkover

Alsab To Pass Up $10,000 Event--Ten Originally Qualified

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26 (AP)—Officials of the Maryland Jockey Club announced today that Calum farm's Whirlaway was the only horse which would run in the $10,000 Pimlico Special, feature of Pimlico's opening day program Wednesday, and that he would therefore win in a walkover.

Henry A. Parr III said the management had been notified by Al Selsab of Chicago that his wife Alsab would pass up the special in favor of the Westchester handicap at Empire City.

Whirlaway thus became the only starter, and will win in the richest walkover recorded in the annals of the North American turf.

Parr also announced that the Pimlico management had decided to shift its Army Emergency Relief day, when all net proceeds of the track will be donated to the fund, to Saturday, the date of the Pimlico futurity. The benefit had been planned for Wednesday.

Parr is president of the Maryland Jockey Club.

Originally there were ten thoroughbreds which had won races qualifying them for the event, but Pimlico officials said their owners had apparently been frightened at the weight for age conditions.

Under these conditions, even four-year-olds would have to carry 126 pounds and every three-year-old 120 pounds for the mile and three-sixteenths.

They all backed down but Alsab and Whirlaway--and today the new came through that Alsab too, would be out of the race.

The Westchester handicap carries added money of $25,000, which may explain why Alsab and Whirlaway won't get together for a fourth meeting in the special.

First '300' Game

The first "300" game of the season to be reported to the American Bowling Congress was rolled September 18 by Cy Caldwell, a defense worker, in the Schmitzer-Cummins League in Indianapolis, Ind. His games: 170, 194, and 300 for 604.

Ohio State Still Tops College Grid Poll

Buckeyes Snare 80 of 123 Votes For First Place

Notre Dame Takes Fourth behind Georgia and Alabama

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP)—Ohio State for the third straight week tops the Associated Press poll as the country's best college football team. The Buckeyes so dominated the balloting that eighty of the 123 voters made them their first place choice and not one rated them lower than sixth. In all, the Ohioans collected 1,150 points, each No. 1 selection meaning ten points, second nine, etc.

Georgia and Alabama retained the No. 2 and 3 slots but fourth was won by Notre Dame, a club that was languishing in twenty-second place only two weeks ago. The Irish bounded to eighth last week after their win over the Iowa Seawawks and climbed again this week following their triumph over previously unbeaten Illinois.

They displaced Michigan, which skidded to thirteenth by losing to Minnesota, and Georgia Tech moved into the fifth place which Illinois relinquished.

Wisconsin Takes Sixth
Wisconsin, another of the Midwestern stalwarts, moved from seventh to sixth and Boston College vaulted from tenth to seventh. Army and Texas Christian, the leaders of the second ten a week ago, nabbed the two spots directly below the Massachusetts Eagles with Minnesota, only No. 13 a week ago, completing the top grouping.

Although the juggling of positions this week affected only the lower members of the select ten, next week's shakeup may be even more drastic as Ohio State plays Wisconsin, presently No. 6, at Madison Saturday.

In addition, Georgia and Alabama will decide their Dixie battle at Atlanta. Results of those two games alone could cause more damage to the present rankings than a 200-pound tackle in a china shop.

Army Meets Quakers
Another contest finds Army at Pennsylvania. The Quakers, regarded as the best in the East's informal Ivy League, now rank No. 14.

The poll is restricted to college teams and does not include the four pre-flight aggregations, camp or fore eleven although it was Notre Dame's victory over Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman's Iowa Seawawks that lifted it into the limelight.

Louisiana State duplicated that jump by overwhelming Georgia Pre-Flight, 34 to 0, Saturday and climbing from nowhere to nineteenth in the listing.

The standings of the teams (first place votes in parentheses, points placed on 10-9-8-7 etc., basis)

FIRST TEN
Ohio State (80) 1150
Georgia (25) 1029.5
Alabama (6) 951.5
Notre Dame (3) 704.5
Georgia Tech (3) 668
Wisconsin (1) 574.5
Boston College (4) 418
Army (1) 295
Texas Christian (2) 254
Minnesota 232

SECOND TEN
11—UCLA 170; 12—Illinois 160; 13—Michigan 90; 14—Pennsylvania 68; 15—Syracuse and Tulsa tied, each 33; 17—Texas 23; 18—William and Mary 16; 19—Louisiana State 15; 20—Tennessee 14.
Also runs—Texas A. and M. 5; Mississippi State 3; Pennsylvania State 4; Santa Clara 3; California 3; Virginia Military 2; Princeton 2; Detroit 2; Williams 1; Washington State 1; Duke 4.

How Experts Do It

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP)—Bob Mitchell, football expert for the Dayton, Ohio, Journal, not only named the ten leading college football teams on his ballot but placed five, including the first three, in the positions they won in the Associated Press's weekly poll.

Rut Samuel of the Augusta, Ga., Herald, also voted only for the top ten but had only one club, Alabama, in the position it ultimately won. R. A. Lofstrom of the St. Cloud, Minn., Times, named the first six teams in their exact positions on his ballot but could name only eight of the winning ten.

One hundred twenty-three ballots were counted.

Old Liners Get Dope On Florida 'Gators

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 26 (AP)—The University of Maryland football squad spent its practice time listening to Assistant Coach Al Heagy tell what he knew about the Florida 'Gators, who meet the Old Liners Saturday in Washington.

All of the Maryland players were on hand except Bill Byrd, who suffered a severe leg injury last week in the Western Maryland game. Byrd, starting center, was hurt on the first play.

Heagy told the squad he felt Maryland has a good chance to defeat Florida providing the Old Liners present topnotch football. The 'Gators have plenty of heft and driving power, he said.

New Race Track Near Charleston Opens Next Week

Kanawha Jockey Club Throws Precaution to the Wartime Winds

By HARRY W. BALL
CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 26 (AP)—The Kanawha Jockey Club, throwing precaution to the wartime winds, played perseverance, priorities and prayer across the board—and today the West Virginia Racing Commission certified the payoff.

Work, worry and resourcefulness mixed in the proper proportion are responsible for the fact that at Kanawha Park next Wednesday will begin a nineteen-day racing meet introducing the state's third track and one of the few to be set up since the war began.

From Chairman Beverly Brown of the West Virginia Racing Commission came word that all requirements and conditions had been met and "they'll definitely run" October 28 at the new plant ten miles west of Charleston.

As for the work, consider transforming a country fairgrounds into a half-mile racing plant at a time when priorities are needed to build a wood shed and achieving results that even Brown describes as a "nice little layout."

The worry came about from those same priorities and materials shortages on the one hand, while unraveling red tape and meeting heavy bond requirements on the other.

Circus Tent Rented
The resourcefulness? Well such things as renting a circus tent for the thoroughbreds that can't be housed in the permanent stables, and dickering with a steamboat concern to provide river transportation for racing fans.

Sam Chilton, attorney and public relations director of the Kanawha Jockey Club, has the reason for the new enterprise:

"There's plenty of money around and people want to do something with it. They want to be out in the open for their diversion and we think we have the answer."

For those who have no cars, Chilton said a regular bus schedule provided a twenty-minute service, emphasizing that races would be timed so as not to conflict with changes in shift at a war plant nearby.

Another probable answer will be a river boat carrying passengers from a mid-town Charleston wharf on the Kanawha river to the park. Permanent stables at the new racing plant provide 325 stalls but some of these will be used for tack rooms and grooms.

Chilton said that a tent already had been leased from a circus to take care of the expected overflow. Brown described the layout as a "nice little half-mile plant, well equipped with all modern conveniences."

Leading Officials in Charge
"The track is in good shape," he continued, "and compares favorably with half-mile plants in Maryland and elsewhere."

Chilton explained that the reconditioning, which was started only last August, as possible because no new construction was involved. He said that only used lumber was employed in making the repairs, consequently there were no priority entanglements.

For the nineteen-day meeting, Brown said the commission had endeavored to have leading race officials in charge.

He mentioned Fred Burton, track secretary of Brehm Park, Columbus, O.; T. C. Bradley of Louisville, Ky., state steward and judge; Albert Diechman, pari-mutuels manager from Hialeah Park, Fla., and others.

For the first meeting, Kanawha Park officials expect twelve carloads of horses from Ascot in Ohio, others from Keeneland, Ky., Laurel, Md., and elsewhere.

Another item of which Chilton is particularly proud:

"This is the only track in West Virginia (others are at Charles Town and Wheeling) that is entirely backed by West Virginia capital."

A factory in the Middle East is producing 2,000 drinking glasses daily by cutting off the upper portion of used beer bottles and smoothing the edge.

Meet the New Queen of the Fleet

CALLING IN THE CARRIER'S FLOCK

Here's how the landing-signal officer directs a plane's safe homecoming to the flight deck of a U. S. aircraft carrier.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Wide World Features Writer
WASHINGTON.—Navy Day, 1942, finds Uncle Sams naval forces riding a new and revolutionary course in sea warfare.

The airplane has become the queen of the seas and the aircraft carrier is replacing the battleship as the backbone of the fleet. The Navy high command is giving unprecedented recognition to the importance of air power in winning the war and "keeping it won."

Aircraft carriers take front position in the new seven-ocean naval construction program designated to give us complete domination of the Pacific and the Atlantic.

The President has congressional authorization to build as many planes for the Navy as is considered necessary for overwhelming superiority in the air. The present program calls for a force of 27,000 planes. The Senate naval affairs committee recently reported that the output of navy planes was close to 2,000 a month. The plane pilot training program aims at a rate of 30,000 pilots a year.

Flyers Promoted

Further recognition of aviation by the Navy high command was the recent promotion of seven flying officers to the rank of rear admiral. President Roosevelt went far down the list of navy captains in elevating fliers ahead of regular line officers.

In the eight-billion-dollar, seven-ocean navy program, carriers comprise more than one-fourth of the tonnage—500,000 tons of 'em. Several cruisers and merchant ships under construction also are being converted into carriers. The number of carriers is a military secret.

Not a single new battleship is included in the vast program which ultimately will put more than 1,000 U. S. men-of-war on the high seas. Besides carriers, the program goes heavy on cruisers, destroyers and small vessels, including many submarines.

In the last official report of strength, made in October a year ago, the Navy listed 346 fighting ships in service and 347 building. In addition to the eight-billion-dollar measure, Congress recently authorized the spending of $887,000,000 on submarines.

Meanwhile, the Senate Naval Affairs committee reports that construction of submarines is running 318 months ahead of schedule, carrier building 215 months ahead and destroyer construction 203 months ahead.

Family Skeleton May Prove Test Of A Man's Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

How strong is the average man's love?

Would the boy you love continue to love you even though your family cupboard revealed a skeleton? Think this over a little, before you consider the case of Cecile:

"During the past few months I have fallen in love and become engaged," writes Cecile. "We had planned to marry soon but my fiancé has been inducted into the army. We still intend to marry when he comes home on furlough.

Father Never Forgives

"My mother says that I must tell my fiancé our family secret before things go any farther. It is this: When I was 15 I lost my father. It really means that he was sent to prison for misappropriating funds. My mother has never forgiven him. We moved to another city where no one knew us, and where the thing would never come out," she says.

"I haven't committed a crime so why should I tell him? Must I risk losing the boy I love? You see, I love him dearly, and I'm sure he loves me as much. Of course, it may make no difference if he did know. But I lie awake every night wondering if it would change his love," concludes the letter.

This poor, fear-ridden girl writes:

U. S. AIRMEN RESCUED FROM SEA NEAR SOLOMONS

These three United States airmen took to their rubber boat when Japanese shot down their plane in the Solomon Islands area. Ship rescuing them is at left. The man at the extreme right is reaching for a life preserver, while another treads water and a third appears to be clinging to a piece of equipment near the rubber boat. (This is an official United States Navy photo.)

as though she had a problem. Actually, of course, she has none. She knows, deep in her heart, that she mustn't begin any bridal preparations till she has taken the family skeleton out and aired it. There could be no greater folly than to marry on a basis of deceit.

Depends on the Man

Of course, this skeleton-airing may not result happily. That depends on the young man. He may love her more when he learns what she has suffered, or he may seize his hat and run. In the latter case, she may be fortunate in getting rid of him. But such knowledge is cold comfort, I admit.

I can say that I have never heard of a family skeleton that forced an attractive girl to remain permanently unmarried. Such things simply don't happen. The urge of love is too strong. If one lover is whitelivered, another will be stout-hearted.

But here's another point for Cecile to remember: In her own strong, youthful desire for love and happiness, has she forgotten that her father is, after all, a human being and alive? He is paying bitterly for his lapse. Must he know in addition that his wife and daughter have forgotten him?

My dear Cecile, why not face the facts a little more clearly? Your mother, in her own bitterness, may have influenced you too much. Suppose you open your heart a little wider and let some of the warmth of daughterly compassion steal into it.

Nickel that used to go into twelve silver-plated table forks is now enough for 675 incendiary bombs.

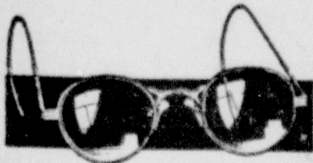

Married Men Face Draft in December

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26 (AP)—Induction of married men without children, who are now classified in 3-A, will begin in Maryland in December. Col. Henry C. Stanwood, state director of selective service, announces. By the end of November, Stanwood said, the supply of 1-A men including those with collateral dependents recently reclassified, will have been exhausted.

concerning draft of married men with children had not yet been received, Stanwood said, adding that although many married men had already been inducted they were taken because their marriage occurred when induction was considered "imminent."

Even if Congress passed the present legislation making 18 and 19 year olds eligible for the draft, Stanwood continued, the induction of married men would not be delayed "more than a few weeks."

You'd replace a broken window fast

...other heat losses may be costing you even more!

Imagine sitting there like a lazy-bones while gale and snow blow in through a broken window! Absurd? Sure! Nobody would do it. They'd replace the broken window fast.

But you do almost the same thing when you tolerate other heat losses... losses that may be costing you even more.

Heat loss through the roof, for instance, or the walls. Heat loss through your windows and doors, and around your windows.

The Government wants you to save fuel for victory. It's not only a good idea for war production reasons, but it's good business for your own pocketbook. And these savings last not only for the war but go on year after year.

We mean permanent improvement of your home through insulation, installation of storm windows and doors, and weatherstripping. Look into it while there's time. Check with your nearest contractor-dealer and see how easy it is to "winter-condition" your home for good... and to "summer-condition" it, too!

TRYING TO NIP A SLAM

DEFENSE against a constructively bid slam contract should be concentrated solely upon the best chance to take a single trick, if it is a grand slam, and two tricks, if it is a small slam. Against a mere game, you have to take more tricks to beat it, and so have to employ different tactics. When you hold the same honor combination at the top of two different suits—such as a K-Q-J sequence—ordinarily it is best to lead the longer of the two suits against a game and the shorter against a slam, as you are more likely to find the declarer holding losing cards in your shorter suit.

2♦	3♠	Pass	3♦
Pass	5♥	Pass	6♥

With slight variations, that bidding came at several tables of a duplicate. Some of the declarers made the slam and others were set, the result depending entirely on what East led. Where a diamond was chosen, the contract was made; where a spade, it was nipped.

With the diamond lead, North won, ruffed the diamond 3 with the heart 2, led to the heart A and K, ruffed the diamond 6 with the heart 9, then began to run clubs. West ruffed the third one with the heart J, but his desperate spade shift fell to the A and the next two clubs brought a discard of North's second spade, so that he lost only that trump trick.

Nothing could be done to save the day for North when East led his spade K. The A was knocked out at once, so that, as soon as the heart J won a trick, the setting spade could be scored. North had no trouble ruffing out his diamonds, taking two hearts and then leading clubs; but it was impossible to discard the spade loser before West made his ruffing trick and then switched to the spade which settled the issue.

SGT. HINZE CABLES GREETINGS TO SON ON HIS BIRTHDAY

"Safe and well. Loving birthday wishes from daddy"—is the wording of a cablegram received by Charles Hinze, of 118 Hanover street, from his father, First Sgt. Frank H. Hinze, who is believed to be somewhere in the British Isles with the One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry, Twenty-ninth Division, United States Army.

The greetings were received by the youngest son Sunday, just one week in advance of his eighth birthday.

Sgt. Hinze is one of Cumberland's best known soldiers. He served fifteen and a half years with Company G, Maryland National Guard, before being inducted into federal service one and a half years ago. Before being sent across the Atlantic, he was stationed at three different camps, namely, Fort Meade, Md., Camp Blanding, Gainesville, Fla., and Camp Kilmer, New Jersey.

While a member of the local unit of the national guard, Sgt. Hinze was in charge of the drum corps of the First Maryland Regiment and he and his wife, Mrs. Sylvia Hinze, were custodians of the local state armory and supervised the roller skating rink there.

The Hinzes also have a sixteen-year-old daughter and a thirteen-year-old boy.

'Y' Membership Drive Will Be Discussed At Meeting Today

Plans for the Central Y.M.C.A. membership drive will be discussed at an informal dinner meeting scheduled for this evening at 6:15 o'clock at the "Y". Roy W. Eves, membership chairman, will preside.

A meeting of the executive and finance committees will be held preceding the dinner at 5:15 p. m. with the Rev. Alfred L. Creager, vice-president of the association, presiding.

This is another in a series of articles written by Cumberland laymen which Chatter has been publishing during the "Go To Church Loyalty Campaign" in October. Today's article is by C. E. Patterson, lay leader of Kingsley Methodist church.

"At a time when we are feverishly training and equipping the greatest armies of modern history in our determination to put down for all times such military madmen as Hitler and his kind," Patterson writes, "we are very prone to overlook one of the most important things in America today."

"Yes, there are other things as important as guns, bombs, tanks, planes and ships, and we had better find time to promote this most important thing in our land. One of the most vitally important things in America yesterday, today and tomorrow is a sincere and abiding faith in God."

"For what would it profit a nation if it gained mastery of the whole world, but lost its soul? And those who profess to be God fearing—God loving people had better ponder that statement pretty seriously."

"If America keeps its soul, it will be because those who make their way, in foul weather or fair, to the houses of worship on the Sabbath had enough passion, determination, courage and religion to accomplish that heroic result."

"Under the stress and strain of the moment one can hear people asking the questions: 'Has the church anything for the day and the world in which we are living?' Is there a God and is He functioning now?"

"Yes, the church has something to offer. Here one can find a satisfying answer. Here the souls of weary men and women can find rest and solace after all else has failed. Here is the one source of hope and inspiration. Here is the anchor that holds fast when storms beat down upon us. Here God reaches forth to save mankind from himself."

"That is why in these articles by ministers and laymen we beseech you to go to church, the church of your choice. How I would like to see my country save its soul and choose the right course in this trying time. How I would like to see the Church rise to its task and win the acclaim of my God in this world upheaval."

Retired B. and O. Conductor Dies At His Home Here

"Captain Bob" Compton,
72, Railroaded 50 Years;
Began as Brakeman

Robert Ashton "Captain Bob" Compton, 72, 4 Browning street, an employee of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for fifty years, died early yesterday morning at his home after a serious illness of ten days. He retired four years ago as a passenger conductor.

Mr. Compton, a son of the late Peter Van Buren and Permelia Catlett Compton, was born in Doe Gully, W. Va., but while still very young moved with his parents to Martinsburg, W. Va., where he spent his childhood days.

Yardmaster in Cumberland
At the age of eighteen years, Mr. Compton and his parents moved to Brunswick and it was then that he began his railroad career, starting as a brakeman. From 1905 to 1909, he was yardmaster in Cumberland and gave up that position to return to the road. He moved to Cumberland with Mrs. Compton, the former Miss Cora Norris, of Brunswick, in 1901.

"Captain Bob" was a personal friend of Daniel Willard, former B. and O. president and Charles W. Galloway, former vice president, and was known throughout the territory served by the line.

Flood Problem More than Local, Lee Observes

Control Measures Needed
for Whole Potomac
Basin, He Says

Evincing interest in the Potomac basin flood control problem, Col. E. Brooke Lee, of Silver Springs, attended the meeting of the mayor and city council yesterday and heard the discussion of the local situation.

Following the meeting, he was requested by David Kauffman, chairman of the citizens flood control committee, to express his views.

"There are two separate parts of the proposed flood control program for Cumberland," Col. Lee said, in part. "One, what Cumberland may do of an immediate nature; two, what can be done along the entire upper stretch of the Potomac to control and permanently relieve the flood damage along that important river."

Washington is more greatly interested in flood control all along the Potomac river than ever before, Col. Lee declared. "The water two weeks ago," he said, "was higher in Washington than it was in 1936. President Roosevelt spent considerable time inspecting the bridges in that area. All of the men that the city government could hastily employ and thousands of soldiers were busy building bag and other dikes to protect the main city buildings."

Citizens Group Cites Danger of Spring Flood

City Council Urged To Take Action on Dredging
Creek and River

Saying that is the opinion of engineers and many other people that Cumberland is in grave danger of a serious spring flood unless immediate action is taken to dredge the creek and river and remove obstacles, a self-appointed citizens flood control committee asked the mayor and city council yesterday to take immediate action to remove this possibility.

David Kauffman, a local attorney, spoke for the committee. He explained that the group had met last week and prepared a resolution urging immediate relief, and the appointment of a planning board of three experts, as recommended by a previous flood committee, to evolve a permanent solution to the local flood problem.

Reviews Situation

Reviewing the situation here, the attorney told the council that previous recommendations and suggestions and requests for action had been "pigeon-holed." He stated there is no quarrel with the present administration and that the committee appears before council in the friendliest way. It is the desire of the committee to help in every way possible and to do all it can to keep interest in flood control alive, he explained.

Mayor Thomas F. Conlon, who did most of the talking for the council, proposed that the committee meet again and bring in some definite plan after making further studies.

Kauffman suggested that the committee has already been over the flood control proposal completely and that there is no need to do so again. "What is really needed now," he exclaimed, "is action and not study or delay."

Auditor Explains Cost

At the request of Mayor Conlon, the city auditor, Arthur B. Gibson read and explained figures he had prepared on a hypothetical flood control cost figure of $2,000,000, to show what this project means in dollars and cents to the city government.

The auditor reported the city's debt limit was $4,930,000 and said on April 1 it was $2,823,000, that a two million dollar issue would bring the city up to its limit, that about three percent interest would have to be paid for such bonds, and that further improvements, no matter how desirable, would have to be delayed.

The auditor explained that if a two million dollar issue is retired at the rate of $50,000 yearly for 40 years the tax rate would jump 10 cents yearly. He said the interest for the first year would add an additional twelve cents to the tax rate and thus over forty years the increase would range from 22 to 103 cents.

Pointing out it has been six and one-half years since the last major flood, he explained the cost in this period based on the $2,000,000 outlay would have been $688,750.

Among others who discussed the situation were F. Brooke Whiting, former city solicitor; County Commissioner Patrick J. Stakem; Patrick E. Kean, W. Wallace McKaig, City Solicitor Charles Z. Heskett and Police Commissioner James Orr.

Calls Situation Serious

Commissioner Stakem said, "We are not merely asking for immediate action to dredge the creek and river, we are pleading for it." The situation is worse than it has ever been and the danger of a spring flood is acute unless some dredging is done now, Stakem added. The commissioner expressed the opinion that the dredging could be (Continued on Page 7, Col. 4)

Work; Dr. Breitstein Will Be in Charge

The second of a series of clinics for hearing defects in children will be conducted under the joint sponsorship of the American Legion auxiliary, the Allegany County Board of Education and the Allegany County Health Department from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., Thursday, November 5, in the headquarters of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, city hall plaza.

Miss Anne M. Sloan, of Lonaconing, child welfare chairman, Maryland department, of the American Legion, announced yesterday that approximately forty children from the county's public and parochial schools will be examined by Dr. M. L. Breitstein, of Baltimore, during the one-day clinic. Nurses of the county health department will assist the clinician.

The American Legion Auxiliary finances the clinics at which children with a marked degree of deafness are examined and treated. Miss Sloan pointed out the clinics are conducted for the purpose of correcting hard of hearing cases at an early stage in view of the fact that many young men entering the armed services were found to be suffering from serious ear conditions.

Clinic hours will be 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon and from 1 to 4 p. m.

WRECKED ENGINES—

In the night scene shown above, are parts of two giant Baltimore and Ohio railroad locomotives which collided Sunday evening at Pinto, injuring five trainmen and wrecking eighteen freight cars. At the left is the tender of engine No. 6149 which was backing toward this city in the path of freight train engine No. 7103, shown on its side. At the left is part of the tender sticking up in the air. The huge opening torn in it by the freight engine gives some idea of the terrific force of the impact. The wreck was cleaned up and traffic resumed early Monday morning.

Now; Expect To Have
35 Stations Here

Applications can now be taken out by local experienced tire men who wish to become authorized inspectors for local War Price and Rationing Board No. 1-1, it was announced yesterday by Daniel F. McMullen, board chairman.

Billboard Firm Seeks Court Aid To Erect Signs

Files Bill of Complaint against City over Revoked Permits

A bill of complaint was filed in circuit court yesterday by the Criterion Advertising Company, a corporation and Charles A. Langer, against the mayor and city council of Cumberland, a municipal corporation, involving the erection of a number of bill boards in the city.

The suit contends that Langer, on September 22, entered into a written agreement with the advertising company to lease space on walls of buildings at 300, 500 and 501 North Centre street at a yearly rental of $10 each for the erection of signs.

It is further explained that on October 5, Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer issued permits for the erection of the signs and that the advertising company paid a license fee of $3 for the signs.

On the next day, however, the mayor and city council without notice to Langer or the sign company, attempted to revoke the permits and has since warned the sign company that attempts to erect the signs police would tear them down and arrest agents and workmen of the sign company.

Langer contends he is hampered in the rightful use of his property by the action of the city officials and the sign company asserts it has been hampered in the proper and lawful conduct of its business.

The court is asked to enjoin the city from stopping the erection of the signs and from arresting or fining or imprisoning or in any way interfering with the representatives of the company or with Langer.

Associate Judge William A. Huster issued an order directing the city to file an answer to the charges on or before November 2.

This case has grown out of a plan to erect eighteen sign boards in various parts of the city. When it became known publicly that permits had been granted for the erection of the signs, numerous organizations and individuals raised objections. The mayor and council then ordered the permits rescinded.

Exceptions To Sale of Lippold Farm Are Dismissed in Court

Walter W. White Bid $25,000 for Property at Foreclosure

Exceptions filed to the sale of the Lippold farm on Bedford road, were dismissed in circuit court yesterday in equity case No. 16,761 filed by Charles W. Lippold, and others against Walter C. Capper, assignee.

The case grew out of a mortgage foreclosure sale of the Lippold farm, at which Walter W. White bid $25,000 for the property and purchased it.

Before the court could ratify the sale, exceptions were filed by Charles W. Lippold, Henry T. Lippold and Louis A. Lippold, all sons of the late Joseph Lippold.

In the court's opinion it was mentioned that the farm in question had been bequeathed to the wife of the late Joseph Lippold and that she had sold it to the three brothers. She took a mortgage for $25,000 for the property and there was no indication, the decree states, that nothing was ever paid on the account or that any interest had ever been paid.

The court also took recognition of the fact that the farm had been in the Lippold family for years and that there was a certain sentimental value. The property had been variously estimated as worth $21,000 to $30,000 the court said.

The court's opinion explained that there was no charge of unfairness or want of opportunity of the exceptions to buy the farm at the sale. There was nothing shown or indicated that was done at the sale to deprive the Lippold brothers of any right which they had.

The brothers had engaged a real estate agent to represent them at (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)
